Unemployment at 13-year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate leaped to 6.5 per cent in November, its highest level in 13 years, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the number of unemployed Americans rose by 482,000 last month to a total of 5,975,000.

At the same time, total employment in the nation dropped by nearly 800,000 last month to 85.7 million, virtually wiping out the entire increase in the number of jobs over the past year.

Massive layoffs in the automobile industry and job losses in electrical equipment and textile industries and retail trade accounted for most of the job losses last month, the department said.

The November increase in the unemployment rate — from 6 per cent in Octber — was the biggest monthly jump since the November-December period in 1960 when joblessness rose from 6.1 to 6.6 per cent.

The last time unemployment hit 6.5 per cent was in October of 1961, a recessionary year.

The sharp increase in unemployment last month, a reflection of the nation's deepening recession, is expected to spur changes in Ford administration economic policy. It also is likely to speed congressional passage of new legislation to aid the unemployed.

A measure approved Thursday by the House Ways and Means Committee would provide an additional $1 billion in emergency jobless benefits over the next year.

The Labor Department said most of the increase in unemployment last month was accounted for by workers who were either laid off or fired from their last jobs. Over the past year, unemployment has risen by almost 1.9 million, with the portion of job losers among the unemployed increasing from 37 per cent to 47 per cent.

The November unemployment figures were based on data gathered before the middle of the month. Thousands more workers have been laid off since then, in part due to slumping auto sales and the nationwide coal strike. This will push the jobless rate for December still higher.

This trend was indicated Thursday in the Labor Department's weekly report on unemployment insurance benefits. The report said the number of initial claims for jobless benefits increased by 81,600 during the week ending Nov. 23 and that 42 states reported higher volumes.

A year ago, 1,430,000 workers were receiving unemployment insurance benefits.

The November increase in the jobless rate represented the third monthly spurt in a row. After taking 10 months to rise to 5.4 per cent from last October's 3½-year low of 4.8 per cent, the rate jumped to 5.8 per cent in September and then climbed an additional two-tenths of a per cent in October.

Chairman Alan Greenspan of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said earlier this week that industry layoffs, especially in the auto industry, were worse than anticipated. He predicted that the unemployment rate will continue upward until it reaches "something over 7 per cent" in the third quarter of 1975.

House burns; children saved

DEXTER — Fire destroyed the Vernon Belcher home at 1212 Pine Street at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, but four children who were in the home were carried to safety.

Mrs. Belcher, who was at home with the small children when the fire was discovered, carried the children from the home before flames destroyed it. She took them to the home of a neighbor. Neighbors and passersby helped her to get the children out of the home. No one was injured.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined but it was believed to have started in the attic of the one-story dwelling.

"I saw and smelled smoke and ran to the bedroom," Mrs. Belcher sobbed as she stood in the yard, watching the flames destroy the home.

"I ran to the children, and then ran for help," she explained.

Her husband is an employee of IXL Handle Company in Dexter and is also a musician. A large amount of musical equipment, including amplifying equipment, was in the home but much of it was carried out. Some of it was damaged by smoke and heat, however.

Little else of value was saved.

The flames spread quickly throughout the house, despite the fact that firemen responded quickly. But the flames had spread so quickly that by the time firemen arrived much of the main portion of the house was aflame and it was spread rapidly.

Belcher said the contents were not covered by insurance.

Sikeston man to head SeMo Scout Council

He succeeds Dr. Mark Scully, president of Southeast Missuri State University in Cape Girardeau.

Other officers are Francis Lewis of Cape Girardeau, vice president and assistant treasurer; Dr. George Ladyman of Poplar Bluff, vice president; Lehman Godwin of Dexter, vicpresident Ken Myles of Cape Girardeau, council commissioner; J. P. Tlapek of Cape Girardeau, treasurer; James Lansmon of Cape Girardeau, assistant treasurer; and Wendell Black of Cape Girardeau, assistant treasurer.

Dr. R. A. Ritter Sr., of Cape Girardeau was elected national council representative. Twenty-four men were named to the council advisory committee, 44 were named council members at large and 88 were named to the executive board for 1975.

Hedrick has been an adult Scouter in the Southeast Missouri Council since 1967. He has served as district chairman, district advancement chairman, council advancement chairman and council vice presdident.

He is a member of Sikeston Rotary Club, First United Methodist Church board of directors and is an adult Sunday School teacher. He served as a Lt. Commander in the U.S. Navy in World War II.

He received his Bachelor of Science of Education from Frostburg State University in Frostburg, Md. and his Master of Business Administration from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. His wife, Lois,is a fourth grade teacher at Lee Hunter elementary school in Sikeston. They have a son and two daughters.

Max Hatfield of Kansas City, area director of the North Central Region, talked briefly about a Scout and his council, noting that special emphasis must be given to training capable leaders in scouting. He said the best training program offered to adult leaders is the woodbadge course and encouraged more adults to take advantage of it.

He said the council's purpose is not to offer scouting to every boy and girl who want it, but to provide a program that will build character and citizenship for all who participate in scouting. Hatfield was executive of the Southeast Missouri Council in 1943. The North Central Region, which he now directs, includes 16 councils in Missouri and Southern Illinois.

Committee chairmen reported that 1974 was a good year for the SeMo Council in advancement, leadership training, camping,

Malden voters to decide on 1-cent sales tax

MALDEN — Voters of Malden will again be asked to approve a one-cent sales tax in a special election to be held Tuesday. It will be the second time within six months the proposal has been submitted to voters.

On June 11 the sales tax was defeated by a narrow margin of 652 to 604.

The decision to call the election is an attempt to meet a deadline for obtaining matching funds for a Federal Environmental Development Administration grant. Malden has applied for 1.7 million grant to provide additional sewer and water lines, sewage disposal plants and access roads to the industrial park.

Malden share of the project is $300,000. City officials must come up with ways and means to finance the amount before EDA will process the application.

The application must be approved Jan. 1 or else be resubmitted and placed on a waiting list.

Marshal Dees arrests son for possession

NEW MADRID — City Marshall Virgil "Flip" Dees Thursday night arrested his son Bobby, 21, for possession of more than 35 grams of marijuana at young Dees's apartment on Highway 61 South. Another youth Ricky Drake, 19, was arrested simultaneously in trailer 55 at Cabana Courts on Highway 61 North for possession of marijuana exceeding 35 grams, two bottles of pills and paraphernalia for administering narcotics were found.

Armed with search warrant, Marshal Dees was accompanied by New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Fred Roe and highway patrol Trooper Myron Houser to the apartment at 11 p.m., where they found and confiscated several plastic bags containing marijuana.

Marshal Dees, who reported the arrest to The Daily Standard today, said the raid and arrest of his sonwas a hard thing to do. He said, however, that it has been equally difficult for him to arrest other young people on marijuana charges when he suspected his son also was involved.

Young Dees waived a preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court this morning and has been released under

City announces trash collection schedule

City manager Charles Church today announced the trash collection schedule which will go into effect Jan. 2, 1975.

The schedule provides for twice weekly collection in the city.

The routes and schedules are as follows: Mondays and Thursdays, area one, east of South New Madrid Street, south of East Malone Avenue and West of St. Johns Drainage Ditch; area two, east of St. Johns Ditch, South of East Malone Avenue and Albert Street, west of the Miner City limits.

Tuesdays and Fridays, area one, north of West Malone Avenue, west of North New Madrid Street; Area two, Sough of West Malone Avenue, and West of South West Street.

Wednesdays and Saturdays, area one, east of North New Madrid Street, North of East Malone Avenue, west of North Ingram Road; area two, South of West Malone Avenue, East of South West Street, west of South New Madrid Street; North of Murray Lane.

Maps showing the routes and schedules will be on public display at the City Administrative Building, Board of Municipal Utilities office and the three city banks.

Collections will begin at 7 a.m. daily so refuse should be out at that time to insure pickup, Church said.

Refuse will be collected from alleys, except for the deadends where the truck would have to back in or out of the alley.

In all other cases, the residential collection will be from the curb, unless arrangements are made with the hauler, James Carlisle. Carlisle will have a telephone installed in the city soon, and can now be reached by calling the City Administrative Building.

City regulations require refuse to be in containers no larger than the 35 gallons with tight-fitting lids. Plastic bags and 55 gallon barrels are not permitted.

There will be no trash collection on July 4, Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's Day.

When a regular collection day falls on a holiday, the hauler will pick up on the next regular collection day, Church said.

There is no limit on the number of cans per collection. Branches will be collected if they are tied in bundles not exceeding 48 inches in length and 24 inches in diameter.

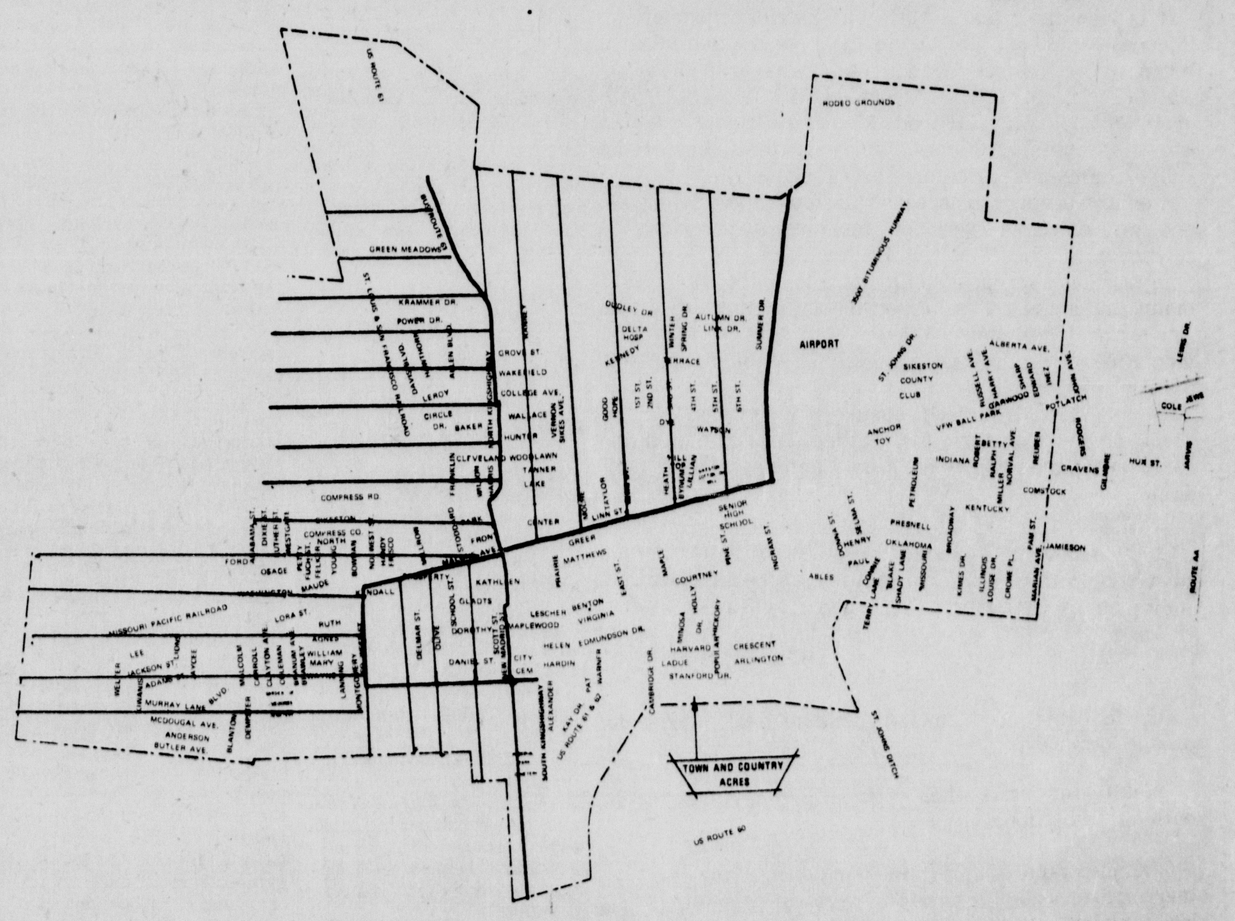
Apartment houses in excess of four units are not covered by the residential collection contract since they are considered commercial units.

Beginning Jan. 2, no open burning will be allowed in the city except for burning leaves, ceremonial fires, agricultural fires and fire department training fires.

All complaints concerning billing or collection should be made to the city. City officials will forward all collection complaints to Carlisle. The city is handling the complaints to insure good coordination and control over the service.

The $2.91 per month refuse hauling fee will be added to the water bill beginning in January.

As a public service, Carlisle will also pickup any 55-gallon containers at no cost during the first week of collection.



City-wide collection days shown

The city refuse collection ordinance will go into effect Jan. 2, 1975. Citywide residential trash collection will begin that day. Areas shown on the map with vertical lines have collection on Wednesday and Saturday; horizontal lines, Tuesday and Friday; no lines Monday and Thursday. The ordinance which bans burning and requires trash collection, does not cover the collection of trash from businesses. Businesses will have to arrange collection on their own.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS

Folks aren't ever so bad or good as their opinions.

Impatience is an American fault — we try to do things too fast, too easily. Increasing the minimum wage (by law) decreases the number of jobs (by economics).

Every wage is a trade — my production for your wage dollars. If I cannot produce enough goods in one hour for you to sell for more than $2.00 (January 1, to be $2.10) you simply can not hire me. No law can force you to, because you would soon be out of business, providing no jobs.

But there is a way to do it (and we all want it done). Train me to produce enough to be worth $2.00, and provide me with modern machines that make it possible for me to produce that much.

It may take time, but — let's be honest — it is the only way it can be done.

Warner & Swasey

Imagine yourself a young girl, lonely and frightened. You have no furniture, no refrigerator or stove, and little money. But you do have a baby and it's Christmas!

Christmas is a time when eyes and ears are turned outside, away from their usual introspective concern toward a compassionate, understanding care for others. Christmas is a time when many persons do more for others, and add an extra special touch to their family relationships.

This young girl was no different, she wanted her baby to have a Christmas as any young child should have. But with so little, where could she turn? Who could possibly help, who would possibly care? The Salavation Army cared.

The Salvation Army cares throughout the year, but especially at Christmas special programs are set up in every community by either the Army's Corps-Community Center or the Salvation Army's Service Unit Committee. Dinners are brought to shut-ins, gift baskets wrapped for the lesser fortunate, and Christmas cheer spread throughout the community.

The joy inspired in those who receive the Army's help reflects the importance of that aid. Joy and hope are hard to express, but this young mother described her hope precisely; "There are only two days of my life, of which i've been touched so deeply. The day my baby was born, and today. Just knowing there are people in this world who really care, makes me sure I'm going to make it."

The relief that her baby would have at least one present Christmas morning overwhelmed this young mother. She wrote: "I'd like to thank you from the bottom of my heart for thinking of me and my baby on Christmas. I understanding now that its not presents that make Christmas. It's people. People like you, who are so loving, so giving, and so concerned."

Sharing IS caring! Your gift to The Salvation Army's Christmas program can help many people just like this young mother. Not only will you brighten their Christmas, but you may also brighten their days throughout the year by your generosity. Mail your check today or drop your gift in a Salvation Army street-corner kettle.

GET OUR BICENTENNIAL GOING

Now that elections are over, it is high time to get another of our many neglected projects back in action, specifically, our nation's Bicentennial celebration.

For a large number of reasons, Federal leadership in the Bicentennial planning has been sadly lacking. Some of the anti-Bicentennial attitude was clearly political; it was feared by some of Nixon's enemies that he might be favored by some of the Bicentennial glory in 1974. Had it not been for Watergate, this would have been near the end of what otherwise might have been a triumphant ending of two terms in office.

Other obstacles came from within the national commission itself, in the form of an "anti-capitalist mentality" which feared that private business might somehow reap financial profits from the birthday event. In the left-of-center circles in Washington, "profit" is a dirty word. So, plans to include business firms were thrown out.

It is also clear that certain anti-patriotic, pro-left influences have been present in the Federal commission. When a Bicentennial headquarters was opened in our Nation's Capital, it was decorated with a mural which depicted Karl Marx, Comrade Mao and others of extreme radical vintage as heroes, while the President of the United States was caricatured as a gangster.

It is time to get such nonsense and foolishness behind us, and get down to work on meaningful programs to celebrate the birth of the United States of America. Congress has appropriated the funds to do the job. A great many important dates in our history leading up to the American Revolution have already missed receiving their Bicentennial recognition because of the inactivity of the Commission

President Ford, himself, should now demand that the Commission produce results. Failing that, he should fire the lot of them and appoint a new Commission which will do so.

I truly believe that someday we will see an America that knows no north or south, no east nor west - an American undivided by creed or color, untorn by suspension or strike.

CHRISTMAS IS ...

Christmas is the only time in your whole life you dared roller skate in the living room and actually got away with it. It is stuffed turkey and grandparents and one more pair of socks for Uncle Frank.

Christmas is the crackle and spit of a new birch log. It's poker-faced threats of sticks and charcoal and empty boxes, and it's not being scared in the least.

Christmas is gobbling down cookies as fast as Mother sugars them. It's plaster-of-paris shepherds, and Dad stringing the treelights on all wrong. And it's tinsel in your hair.

It's candles and shaking hands and a red velvet dress and wine "just this once." It's smiling at the lady on the bus you don't even know, and it's her smiling back.

Christmas is revolving doors and Salvation Army Santas and going shopping all on your own. It's smuggled-in presents and lopsided bows.

It's being tingly cold all over and then it's steamy hot cocoa.

Christmas is bells ringing and snow crunching and children singing. It's a kaleidoscope of color and sound, a time to be sentimental and glad of it.

Christmas is men at peace with themselves. And it goes by so quickly.

GOING "TO THE CITY"?

Just for the heck of it, see how many times this coming week you hear this comment:

"Well, think we may drive up to the city to do some Christmas shopping this week."

Bet you hear it more than once ... and chances are, it's a feminine comment.

Those ladies just aren't thinking.

Most of them, we suspect, run their households on money that comes from business establishments based right here in Clinton, business establishments which, in turn, make their money from people who buy things right here in Clinton.

If everybody "went to the city" to do their shopping, it wouldn't be long until a lot of the money constantly changing hands here stopped making its rounds. This would be a serious situation and one which would affect quite a few jobs. (Ever stop to count how many folks get paychecks and support families from jobs in local stores) We certainly don't want to be any prophet of gloom or doom, but it's no secret that the money situation in the United States has seen better days.

Please -- ladies -- (and any men, too, who might be inclined "to go to the city" -- tho we doubt there are many) -- please try to buy everything possible right here at home in the Golden Valley this year.

Our stores are well-stocked. Our prices are competitive. Buy at home and help keep our local businesses thriving -- and hiring local folks to work in them.

A friend told us the other day he followed this motto: "If you can't buy it in Clinton, you don't need it."

Well, we realize this isn't exactly so ... there are a few things you can't buy in Clinton ... but darn few that are essential, we'll bet.

If you want to "go to the city" and hear the Christmas music (heaven forbid) or see the lights, head right out.

But please ... as much as possible ... try to support your home town, where you live and work, too. It's more important than ever this year. Think it through.

YOU CAN TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS

It may be true, as the Pennsylvania Dutch saying has it, that "we get too soon old and too late smart." But it is not true that getting older necessarily means losing whatever smarts you have.

The commonly held belief that we hit a mental peak at about age 17 and then go downhill for the rest of our lives is a myth, says Dr. Lissy F. Jarvik, a professor of psychiatry at the University of California in Los Angeles.

Citing several studies, including her own, of intellectual functioning among aging populations, she maintains that generally there is no decline in knowledge or reasoning ability, not only into the 30s and 40s, but into the 60s and 70s as well.

One continuing study has been following children who are now adults in their 40s. No decline in intellectual functioning has been observed. Another study has followed college students who were first tested at the time of World War II. These people are now in their 50s, and no decline has been found.

The most common complaint of older people is that their memory is not as good as it used to be. But when learning takes place under laboratory conditions, there is equally proficient learning between young and old people and memory is also often equal.

Much of what we call loss of memory, says Dr. Jarvik, may be due to inadequate learning in the first place, possibly caused by such factors as hearing difficulty, impaired vision, inattention or trying to learn too fast.

In addition, she says, mental deterioration among older people is often a symptom of depression. Mental alertness can often be restored simply by supplying counseling, psychotherapy or antidepressant medicine.

There is also a stereotyped idea about older people and loss of memory, says Dr. Jarvik, and old people are as guilty of it as young ones.

For instance, when an older person puts something some where and can't find it later, we say it is "because of age."

Ah, but when a young person does the same thing, some other excuse is offered and the failure of memory is ignored.

THE MARKUP OF THE SERVICE ECONOMY

The much higher prices that motorists are paying for antifreeze this fall indicates a major problem of our affluent economy -- one that has to be solved before we enter any new era.

In this connection, let us use the shortage of ethylene glycol, the major chemical component in antifreeze, as a test case. Supplies have not kept up with demand, so that the average price of antifreeze per gallon has risen from last year's $1.90 to $5.50. Also, some retailers have been charging as high as $12.50 per gallon, according to some press reports.

In fact, much as the toilet paper incident earlier this year, antifreeze brokers are holding supplies out of normal distribution channels and offering them at inflated prices to the highest bidder. Most retailing firms have declined these high secretive offers.

Union Carbide, whose Prestone is the largest selling brand, has stopped releasing wholesale prices to the press because the ultimate buyer gets mad. A Union Carbide spokesman goes so far as to say that a "fair" retail price is between $5 and $6.50 a gallon "based on our price structure and the normal pricing employed in the auto trades for other products."

According to Dow Chemical, which produces Dowguard antifreeze, the price for wholesale lots is $2.52 a gallon, which indicates a fair retail price would be at least 100 per cent markup over the wholesale price.

What protection do consumers have against a service-inflated economy? Well, one thing they can do is substitute unknown brands from premium- priced labels, as long as the substitute, in this case, is made from ethylene glycol. It's the chemical composition that is important and not the label.

Other options include straining the dirty antifreeze and temporarily replacing it in the cooling system after the cooling system is flushed clean. However, most of us are subject to the marketing of the past years, and some of us are uncertain about substitutes or do-it-yourself programs. A consequence of increasing costs to the consumer is that we will have more awareness of products and an increase in do-it-yourself projects.

The joint national effort of the Executive Branch and the private sector to identify and eliminate rules and regulations that increase costs will not only dampen inflation but bring back value to the marketplace. The costly special privileges of industry, labor and agriculture only make us all pay more at the end of the receiving line. Yes, we have the word's number-one service economy (more than half of GNP is comprised of service items), but the service area is getting out of hand and whenever this is a shortage or even the threat of one there are more people willing to make an extra buck in the chain of command than there are people interested in getting the product to the final user at a reasonable price.

What this all adds up to is that people everywhere are getting fed up with higher prices and are balking on buying.

A vacationer reports that while having a bit of lunch at a roadside restaurant a well-dressed gent came in and ordered a cup of coffee. The waitress served it in a thick, heavy cup.

"Where is the saucer?" asked the gent.

"We don't use no saucers here," said the waitress. "The trade we serve drink coffee out of cups."

The horse would have a good laugh today if he could see motorists adjusting their shoulder harnesses.

Passing a door in the wee hours of the morning, a drunk noticed a sign which read "Ring the bell for the janitor". He did just that, and a sleepy-eyed man came to the door.

"No, Horace Dodge," the driver corrected.

"No, Edsel Ford."

After a short silence, one passenger nudged the lady and said' "Go ahead, you can't be wrong all the time."

Two small boys, aged 7 and 2, were waiting in line at an ice cream stand. The little brother was announcing loudly: "I want vanilla. I want vanilla."

The supply of vanilla had given out. Interested parents stood by to see how the 7-year-old would handle such a crisis. Without flinching, he ordered 2 strawberry cones and handed one to his little brother. "Here you are," he said briskly. "Pink vanilla."

SALT TALKS AGAIN

President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev have worked out "agreements" in their sessions in Vladivostok regarding restrictions on the use of nuclear arms. This is a continuation of the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks and presumably would extend a prohibition of certain nuclear weapons for another 10 years.

The Vladivostok talks do have a positive side. They show that the two great nuclear powers can sit together in discussion of nuclear weaponry and seek means of control. There is a deficit side, however. Russia's good faith in the keeping of agreements has always been questionable, and so far as is known now there is no arrangement for on-site inspection of nuclear stockpiles, either by the contracting powers or neutrals. The critical issue thus boils down to mutual trust.

Whatever final arrangements are worked out on limiting weapons, the United States can't stand idle in its military preparations. Our navel capacity must be expanded to match or surpass that of the Russians. Our ties with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization must be strengthened and our strength in the Far East and Middle East enhanced. Military preparation for defense should have priority in these periolous times. HLH

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: The Kim Kidnaping Case

SEOUL — South Korea's President Chung Hee Park has been bedeviled by a bizarre kidnaping case, which almost brought a break in diplomatic relations with Japan and badly damaged his international standing.

On Aug. 8, 1973, his last presidential opponent, Kim Dae Jung, was abducted in broad daylight from Tokyo's Grand Palace Hotel. He turned up a few days later in Seoul under house arrest.

I have carefully delved into the incident, which has been shrouded in mystery.

Shortly before the kidnaping, Kim Dae Jung called on me in Washington to complain about President Park. I found Kim again this week in a snug home in the maze of byways that make up Seoul.

He looked much the same, an unlikely figure of international intrigue, with a sad, cherubic face. On the wall behind the stove was a picture of himself standing in triumph for a huge presidential rally. He lost the 1971 election to President Park by 900,000 votes.

Speaking with quiet resolve, Kim told me how six burly Koreans had grabbed him in the hotel corridor, thrust him into a room and held an ether-soaked cloth over his nose.

The drug wore off as he was hustled down the elevator. Two Japanese boarded the elevator on the seventh floor. Kim cried out: "Help me! They are going to kill me!"

The two Japanese passengers hastily departed the elevator on the third floor and the kidnapers angrily beat Kim as they continued the ride down to the garage. They pushed him into a car, jammed his head down on the seat and held hands over his eyes and mouth.

They tried several times to anesthetize him, but the ether always wore off quickly. He estimated that the drive lasted five hours.

Kim was taken first to an apartment where he was bound and gagged, then to the waterfront where he was dumped into a small launch. To the best of his belief, this occurred somewhere near Osaka.

His arms were freed and he prayerfully made the sign of the cross, thinking his abductors intended to throw him into the sea. Instead they beat him badly and hauled him aboard a larger ship.

Far out to sea, he was lashed to a wooden board and weighted down with huge stones. He knew for certain he was about to be cast overboard to the bottom of the sea.

"I prayed," Kim told me emotionally. "I asked Jesus Christ to save me. As I prayed, I heard strong noises like bumping, A crew member cried out, 'Airplane!' Then it was reported an American helicopter had appeared."

Kim was dragged out of sight, where he remained tied to the two rocks. Several hours later, a crew member whispered in his ear: "Don't worry. You will be saved."

Not long afterward, his bonds were loosened and he was given a drink. On August 11, he arrived at some port. He judged from the heavy truck noises that it was an industrial port.

Thereafter, he received kind treatment. A doctor attended him twice as he was moved overland to a small farmhouse, then to a Western-style apartment. He knew he was back in Korea.

Eventually, his abductors left him on a side street, tapes over his eyes, with instructions not to remove the blindfold until they had time to leave the scene. As they drove off, he pulled off the tapes and found himself in front of the church in his home neighborhood.

Kim raised a howl about the kidnaping and was immediately placed under house arrest. He was investigated for several weeks for alleged treasonous activity abroad. The charges were abandoned on Oct. 8, 1973, and he was released from house arrest.

The courts asked that he be detained in the country, however, until earlier charges of election irregularities are resolved. Kim admitted that he was now free to attend church, to participate in political activity and to go where he wished within the country.

But he complained that he was under constant surveillance by the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. He also charged that KCIA agents intimidated Korean politicians and newsmen who tried to call on him.

Kim believes his abductors were also KCIA agents, although they identified themselves as members of a patriotic youth party. The American and Japanese press have suggested strongly that President Park himself ordered the abduction of his rival.

I spoke at length to the South Korean leader about the case. Park is a stoic man, with a face that betrays no emotion. But he responded to my question with an uncharacteristic burst of emotion. Heretofore, he had refused to be dragged into the controversy, he said, and, therefore, had not responded to questions about the Kim Dae Jung kidnaping. But he told me earnestly: "I swear to God that I had nothing to do with this ugly affair."

Sources close to President Park agree that the incident would be out of character for him. They say that Park, himself a target for political assassination, has strong feelings against political violence.

I questioned witnesses both in and out of the South Korean government about the kidnaping. I spoke to the KCIA chief, Shin Chick Soo. I also talked to opposition leaders who preferred not to be named.

The kidnapers have never been identified, but almost certainly they were KCIA men. But it also appears that a hard-line KCIA faction acted on its own, without orders from above.

I told President Park of my conclusions. He agreed that the abduction was probably the work of the KCIA. In fact, he said that he had held the KCIA chief responsible for the incident and had summarily fired him. But his successor, Shin Chick Soo, has been unable to locate the kidnap culprits.

The KCIA, like our own CIA, is sometimes unfathomable.

Godfather's Christmas Gift: Con Carlo, Boss of All Bosses 'Retiring' leaving young Mafiosi hunting political connections

NEW YORK — This is the season to be wary of the Godfathers. Hollywood believes that Mafia cinema horrors are Christmas fare. Ghoulish thought.

The real Godfather, according to most authorities is 72-year-old boss of all bosses, Don Carlo Gambino, the quiet man of Massapequa, Long Island. The word is, he's retiring from the chairmanship of the board. He has a house in Florida. He is tired. He is eager to join and fraternize with some of the few old-timers he enjoys. Like the 72-year-old Meyer Lansky who survived the courts, the ancient Murder, Inc. days and bullets.

This is good news but not for the easy reasoning which springs to mind so swiftly. The mob won't disappear. But many of its old connections will.

What most Mafia-watchers and other buffs forget is that the old crowd of dons grew up with the men who made them possible -- the judges, the police commissioners, the mayors and even federal (U.S.) and county district attorneys.

The dons and the judges and the police commissioners and some mighty weighty public citizens would be each other's house guests; they would jolly alongside each other on banquet daises -- mobsters and police commissioners. They made judges. And they collected their I.O.U.s. Frankie Costello, the prime minister, did.

They even planted a high assistant in the office of the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York, once upon a grim time.

But most of those dons are dead, or deathly ill, or rotting in prison, or just rotting as is one of them as a human vegetable with a bullet in the head.

Look at the Godfathers' roster. Olive oil king, the late Joe Profaci, to whose wake came some world famous figures, and from whose "organization" sprang the so-called Columbo mob, is long dead. So is Tommy (Three Fingers Brown) Luchese, friend of mayors and police commissioners (and the fellow who planted, according to the federals, the man on the U.S. attorney's office here), dead.

And of course, the old boss of all bosses Vito Genovese is dead. And New England's alleged Mafia boss Ray Patriarca was sentenced to prison on a murder conspiracy. Philadelphia's underworld organized crime chief Angelo Bruno is very sick. Alleged "family" leader Joe Bonanno is in sunny exile in Arizona.

So of the big five families, this leaves Don Carlo, now eager to do what all elderly men -- and "statesmen" do. Sit in the sun, reminisce, keep an eye on the business. But let the younger men run it.

However, many of the men to whom Gambino reportedly was ready to throw the flaming torch -- or am I being too subtle? -- are in prison. According to FBI Director Clarence Kelley's latest count July 1, there were 1,367 convicted syndicate mobsters including the top Mafia "functionaries" in New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland and New England.

Five Mafia high-ranking chieftains were among the nearly 2,700 mobsters awaiting prosecution on that date.

This is the story in many other cities and states -- Chicago, Detroit, you name them. In Chicago, for example, old timers from the Warner Bros. type movie days today are battling for syndicate control -- and their lives.

This is not only true for New York or Illinois. John Goldstein, the U.S. Attorney for New Jersey, the state once dubbed the most corrupt in the union, has told me and others that the mob is smashed in his state.

"What is left are fragmentized pieces of organized crime families and we are aware of who and where they are. And, we want to keep it that way," said Goldstein.

At another time he said: "The leaders of every organized crime family in this State have been convicted ... and have been incarcerated. Organized crime has been deprived of its leadership and once vast organizations have been splintered into what are today relatively small groups of individuals which can be controlled and monitored by local authorities."

So Carlo Gambino, the don of dons, and whomever is left of his colleagues on what is called, in federal circles, a national commission, have had to dig deeper into the ranks. They have reached for younger men and thus men who have not grown up with the politicos and the jurists and high government officials who protected them.

Nor have they grown up with powerful labor leaders who would rather forget the old dons. Remember that Carlo Gambino ran a labor relations business and was one of the most powerful of all labor fixers.

So what is called the Mafia will have to operate quite differently under its new and younger breed. It won't be easy. It would get more violent as the enforcers instead of the corrupters move up front.

2 sought in hold-up

ESSEX--Stoddard County authorities are searching for two Negro men in connection with the Thursday night armed robbery of Reed's Texaco Station at Essex.

The two men forced station owner Donald Reed and a customer, William McMullen, to lie on the floor and then robbed them of their wallets. Reed's wallet contained $17 and McMullen had $100. They also took $100 from the cash register.

Reed told authorities the men were armed with a small caliber revolver and were last seen headed east at approximately 7:30 p.m.

The men were believed to be driving a light colored automobile.

Wardell man burns to death

WARDELL—A Wardell man was burned to death Wednesday night in his home in a fire apparently caused when the wiring in his television short circuited and ignited.

Authorities said the man, Charlie Canner, 64, was a widower and was alone in his living room when the fire broke out about 8:30 p.m. The fire was confined to that room.

Firemen were called to the Canner home, located in a small development about one mile north of Wardell on Highway B. They summoned an ambulance, but a witness at the scene said Canner was so badly burned that he was probably dead when firemen pulled him from the house.

Canner was taken to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti, where he was pronounced dead on arrival at 9:15 p.m.

COURT SAYS LET 'EM DANCE

KATWIJK, The Netherlands (AP) — The city council of the seaside resort of Katwijk is being forced by court order to grant a permit allowing a dance hall to operate on Sunday.

The council had refused the permit, claiming Sunday dancing would not be acceptable to the majority of the town's population

Youngster runs away from school

BENTON-- Eleven-year-old Terry Kraft of Commerce ran away from the Thomas W. Kelly School about 12:30 p.m. Thursday after becoming disturbed about his sixth grade mathematics class and became the object of a search before showing up at his grandparents' home unharmed Thursday night, Scott County Deputy Sheriff Jack Stewart said today.

The sheriff's department was called to help search for the boy about 8 p.m., Stewart said.

However, he arrived at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kraft of Commerce, shortly after 9 p.m.

"He was safe, but wet and cold," Stewart said.

Bluff man bound over to Circuit on drug charge

BLOOMFIELD — Jimmy Midkiff of Poplar Bluff, charged with attempting to obtain a controlled drug by assuming the role of a doctor, was bound over to Circuit Court for trial, following a preliminary hearing held Thursday before Magistrate Judge Koss W. Blomeyer.

Noel Botsch, pharmacist at Overturf Drug Store in Dexter, testified that a man he believes to be Midkiff called the store on Nov. 14, saying he was Dr. A. L. Williams of St. Louis and ordered a prescription forthe controlled drug Didrex. The caller stated that the drug was for a Mrs.Ralph Gaylord. Botsch said when he tried to contact the alleged Dr. Williams, he found there was no such doctor at the address given, nor could he locate his telephone number. He further testified that later in the day he received a call from a man asking if the prescription had been filled. He saidhe believes the second call came from the same man who had called earlier pretending to be Dr. Williams.Botsch said he told the caller the prescription was ready for pick up and then contacted the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff Rlph Mouser testified the arrested Midkiff shortly before closing time when he arrived to pick up the drug. Mouser said Midkiff told him he was picking up the drug for a Ralph Gaylord of Poplar Bluff who was in Dexter getting a chain saw repaired. He said Midkiff then pointed out the automobile which the two men had driven to Dexter. Mouser said the automobile was watched throughout the night but no one returned to the car.

Midkiff was convicted of a similar charge in 1973, when he tried to forge another prescription at a Dexter drug store.

Albert W. McCulley was given a 30-day jail sentence after he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of impersonating a police officer.

An application for disqualification of judge was entered in the case against Leroy Adams, Charles Dewey Sissom and Truman Eugene Medley of Sikeston, who are charged with the felonious burning of a rural Essex house, owned by Carl and Sue Swinger.

Therrell Edward Fisk of Puxico was given a 30-day suspended jail sentence for nonsupport of his minor children.

Preliminary was set for Dec. 10 for Kelly Bates, charged with felonious assault.

Paying fines for traffic violations were: Moline Bain, driving while intoxicated, $100 and improper registration, $5; Betty Jo Brown of Puxico, careless and imprudent driving, $15; and Wanda Sue Marvel of Dexter, no operator's license, three counts, and improper registration, two counts, $40 fine and a 30-day suspended jail sentence.

Keithie and Gable Gray were fined $10 each for hunting rabbits after hours with a spot light from an automobile.

Camouflage is used in warfare to disguise objects so that they blend into their surroundings. Scientific camouflage was developed during World War I and the French made elaborate devices to conceal military objectives and industrial plants. During World War II, camouflage was used on land and sea but became less effective with the development of radar and aerial photography, The World Almanac notes.

Ann Landers

Waitress dislikes after-dinnersitters

Dear Ann Landers: I have a message for the public and can think of no better way to get it across than to write to Ann Landers. Be an angel and print it.

I supervise a large number of waitresses. Most of them have families and need to go home after work, but they can't leave until YOU do. So...

I am talking to the after-dinner sitters. The businessmen who occupy a table from 6:30 or 7:00 until 11:00 at night. They have five cups of coffee after the meal -- briefcases open and papers strewn everywhere. Don't they have offices?

Then there are the hand-holding smoochers who sit at a table and gaze into each other's eyes for two hours after the food is gone. Don't they have homes?

Please, Ann, the waitresses can't leave until the place is cleared out. Will you do us a favor and say something? -- Tempus Fugit

Dear Temp: Say what? "Dear Restaurant Diners: Please eat and get the heck out of the place because the help wants to go home"?

Sorry, but when people spend money to dine out they have the right to sit and talk, provided other patrons aren't waiting to be seated. After-dinner visiting, be it business or social, is part of the reason people eat in restaurants instead of at home. I'm not about to help you give them the bum's rush.

Dear Ann Landers: Your column with its enormous circulation was largely responsible for starting an intensive effort to eliminate cancer. About a year ago I wrote to you in hope that you would get behind another extremely cruel disease. Aging. You didn't print my letter because you probably thought I was some kind of a nut. I do hope you'll print this one.

We've all seen great writers, statesmen and scientists (as well as friends and relatives) decay in mind and body. The tragic waste and misery caused by aging need no longer continue. Like other diseases that have plagued mankind for centuries, aging can be brought under control, but only when we stop accepting it as "inevitable." Much has been learned in recent years about the biological nature of aging, but no effective attack has been launched because there's been no massive effort.

Please, Ann, get behind this campaign. Aging could join the list of such diseases as bubonic plague, TB, smallpox and polio. -- H. J. of Chicago.

Dear H.J.: There is no doubt that the life span of humans can and will be lengthened. In fact, it's been happening right along. But don't expect some new magic elixir to be developed that will keep people youthful, ad infinitum.

The real "elixirs" are based on (a) what we inherit from our ancestors and (b) how we t ake care of ourselves. We see people all around us eating, drinking and smoking themselves to death. There's no way to keep these people alive, much less youthful.

Dear Ann: I have a two-part bet with a friend. If I win one part he pays me $10. If I win both he pays me $25. He seems so sure of himself, I'm uneasy. The questions are these: (1) Can a fish drown? (2) Is a giraffe mute? I say yes to the first and no to the second. How about it? -- Needles and Pins

Dear N. and P.: You win $25! And if you don't know what to do with the money, give it to your local chapter of The American Cancer Society. The need is great.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism -- Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 35 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

"Jonathan's Thanksgiving," a play by Alice Very, made its debut Nov. 27 in the common room at Southwest Elementary School.

Twenty-four students in Mrs. Warren Harber's second grade class donned buckled Pilgrim hats, Indian feathers and long dresses to illustrate the bitter hardships the Pilgrims experienced. As the pilgrims celebrate their firsts Thanksgiving in the 1620s together, the play tries to show the meaning of trust and friendship.

Mrs. Jerry Nunn, Route One, a student at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, directed the play. Mrs. Nunn is completing her teacher's training under Mrs. Harber.

Roth Puts Novelist Into Spider's Web

MY LIFE AS A MAN. By Philip Roth. Holt, Rinehart & Winston. 330 Pages. $8.95.

Still in his 20s, a successful career as a fiction writer opening before him, life and the future look good to Peter Tarnopol. It is not to be.

Why it isn't is the subject of Philip Roth's eighth novel, an acidulous yet often marvelously comic study of a monomaniac novelist obsessed with his frantic efforts to achieve manhood and his constant failure to do so. The novelist, Tarnopol, who tellingly refers to a character in one of "his" two short stories that appear in this book as "sometimes I think that underneath all that 'maturity' you're just a crazy little boy," has his quest for manhood blown to pieces. That happens when he meets and marries — disastrously — Maureen, a virago to end all viragos.

The marriage, into which Maureen, a calculating survivor from the streets, maneuvers Tarnopol with some transparent to all but him tricks, is a living hell for both of them. As he tells in a long autobiographical narrative — which with the two stories make up the substance of this powerfully written novel — Tarnopol manages to complete a prize-winning novel but after that it's all downhill. Even after he manages to separate from the talent-envying, man-eating Maureen, Tarnopol finds that physical separation does not mean mental separation.

He finds that he has become a person who "keeps mostly to himself, devoting nights as well as days to considering what has become of his life. He is confused and incredulous much of the time, and on the subject of the late Mrs. Tarnopol, he continues to be a man possessed." So possessed, in fact, that he is unable to write anything but "pounds and pounds of pages that. . .had the marriage itself as the subject and constituted the major part of the daily effort to understand how I had fallen into this trap and why I couldn't get out."

Trapped in a spider web of his own making, Tarnopol struggles and struggles again to free himself and the reader can only be fascinated by this obsessive tale that Roth has written so well.

Potato storage suggestions

JEFFERSON CITY--This column is a service from cooperative extension nutritionists at Lincoln University and the University of Missouri. Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Nutrition Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Q. How should potatoes be stored? I understand that they should not be refrigerated , and they turn soft and spoil for me at room temperature.

A. From Dr. Victor N. Lambeth, professor of horticulture at University of Missouri-Columbia: Irish or white potatoes should not be stored in the refrigerator since they are likely to become soggy and develop a sweet taste, is because the starch tends to change to sugar at temperatures below 40. The process can be reversed, the sugar changing back into starch, if the potatoes are returned to room temperature for about 10 days.

For best results potatoes should be stored in a dark, cool, moist place. The old-fashioned root cellars were ideal, but they are uncommon today. Modern basements tend to be to warm and dry. A corner of a garage may be satisfactory if proper precautions are taken. A strong woooden or cardboard box with a good lid can be used, and will need to be covered with burlap bags or other materials to insulate against freezing.

If a garden plot is available, the potatoes can be piled directly on the ground. They should be insulated with straw and then completely covered with 6-8" of soil. A suitable lid will make it more convenient to remove potatoes as needed.

Q. Are plastic containers safe for storing frozen foods? I have been told that the plastic may get into the food, making it unfit to eat.

A. From Professor Harold Bassett, state food and nutrition extension specialist at University of Missouri-Columbia: Plastic containers sold for the purpose of storing frozen foods can be used with complete confidence that they will not cause contamination. In fact, we have no evidence today of plastic dissolving into frozen foods.

Consumers should feel assured that the Food and Drug Administration is doing a good job of monitoring this situation. It is also comforting to know that a great deal of research is now under way to provide information about the safety of all sorts of materials which may come in contact with food.

Menominee Indians once controlled some 9,500,000 acres of Wisconsin, National Geographic says. Their holdings were reduced to 275,000 acres in a treaty between the tribe and the United States in 1854. Today, the Menominees' reservation covers about 230,000 acres.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You all know what toddlers are. They're the little people about two feet tall who walk under coffee tables and are the only ones in the house who can take the caps off the child-safe aspirin bottles.

Specifically, the letter writer was having difficulty advising his toddler in the following areas.

1. There are basic differences between food and clothing. You eat food and wear clothing. Food goes in; clothing goes on.

2. Do not bite anything that will bite back. This includes the dog, other babies, electrical cords, and your father when he is watching professional football on television.

3. Washing your face after a meal is not considered cruel and unusual punishment. It won't do any good to report Mommy and Daddy to the police.

4. Your pacifier is not a permanent part of your face. Removing it is not considered major surgery and does not normally require anesthetic.

5. Don't hide your tennis shoes in the oven when Mommy is making supper. It makes the roast taste funny.

6. Don't use the drapes in the living room to wipe your hands and face unless they are patterned.

7. Diaper rash does not have to be terminal.

I sympathize with the father from Illinois, but I don't know what to tell him. All my kids were born on a Monday and you know how sloppy the production is on a day following the weekend.

I never met three children who could understand me less. When I laid out the pajamas, put the sides up on the crib, and turned on the nite light, they came alive like the "big midnight show", standing on their heads, bringing out all the toys, and playing patty cake with the dog.

When I picked up the phone, like mechanical robots on schedule, they gargled bleach, rolled potatoes across the floor, and climbed on top of the TV set and took off all their clothes.

When I said, "No," they giggled ... "not now", they bit me ... "Come to Mama", they ran into the traffic, "Let me see what is in your hand", they ate it ... and "The strained lamb is good for you", they blew it back in my face.

Ozarks naturalist slated for seminar

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A noted Ozarks naturalist and newspaper columnist, Leonard Hall, who for the past 30 years has been Missouri's most widely read writer on conservation, natural history, wildlife and country life, will be the featured speaker at a banquet highlighting the Southeast Missouri Foundation for Medical Care Inc.'s first semiannual seminar for continuing medical education.

Approximately 50 physicians from a 20-county area served by the foundation are expected to attend the two-day seminar, which will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday at Howard Johnson's Motor Inn.

The seminar, for which attending physicians will receive eight hours of elective credit, is designed to bring doctors up to date on medical topics and types of treatment and provide a program of continuing education.

Hall, a native Missourian who has resided at Possum Trot Farms in the Ozarks since 1946, will speak at the seminar banquet at 7:30 Saturday night.

His column appears in the St. Louis Globe- Democrat, and he has written for magazines ranging from Life and Colliers to Successful Farming and The Land. His four books are "Possum Trot Farm", "Country Year", "Stars Upstream" and "Ozark Wildflowers". He has also produced five color films and lectured for the National Audubon Society and independently in 40 states, Canada and the Caribbean.

Recipient of many state and national awards for writing and conservation, Hall was appointed in 1955 by Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall and served until 1959 as first chairman of the Ozark National Scenic Riverways Advisory Commission because of "his efforts in creating America's first national river."

He holds honorary doctor of law degrees from Westminster College in Fulton and Washington University in St. Louis.

He is a trustee of the National Parks and Conservation Association; a director of the U. S. Humane Society, Defenders of Wildlife, Missouri Nature Conservancy, Missouri Citizens for Conservation, Missouri Audubon Society and Missouri Animal Protective Association; and is a member of other conservation and journalistic organizations.

Miniature orange tree bears fruit

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Deal, 819 Ruth St., are enjoying fresh oranges from a miniature orange tree. The tree is three years old, stands about one foot tall and is producing fruit for the first time. The tree currently has 10 oranges on it which are almost ripe. Two other oranges fell off as they ripened. Although the fruit is only a little larger than golf ball size, Mrs. Deal reports that it tastes just as sweet and good as regular size oranges. The tree, which has become a conversation piece at the Deal house, bloomed in April or May. Mrs. Deal reports that she had no confidence in it growing when she first got it as a gift, but now is very proud of it. (Daily Standard photo)

2 Prairie men bound to Circuit

CHARLESTON---Two East Prairie men, Lindy Williams and Richard Wilson, were bound over to Circuit Court Thursday morning following a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Judge T.J. Brown Jr. on burglary charges.

Witnesses called by the state were Richard Clinton Hutcheson, Bob Bird and Deputy Sheriff Robert Smith. Albert Kent was called to testify for the defense.

According to Hutcheson, he observed the two men putting tools and a television set in a car parked in the driveway of Bob Bird's home near Birds Point about 2 p.m. Oct. 16. Hutcheson said he had passed the Bird home a short time before and noticed the back door standing open and the tools and television set placed in shrubbery near the side of the house.

He said he then went to Albert Kent's home, got a shotgun and told Kent to call the sheriff's office.

After returning to the Bird home, he saw the men loading the items and blocked the driveway with his truck. He said he held the gun on the two men and made them lie down in a road ditch until Deputy Smith arrived.

Who are today's influential Christians?

By David Poling

Recently, the editors of several major religious magazines sat down and decided on a list of the leading churchmen who would be known or have been read by Christians around the world. The editors make up the group which is called Interchurch Features and represents the bulk of main-line denominational publishing. They were aiming at the key group of religious leaders who were shaping the thought and action of millions of Christians, now and in the future.

People who have seen the list were somewhat puzzled. The names presented were worthy and respected enough — the only catch was nobody beyond the editorial circle seemed to know them! To prove an embarrassing point, Martin E. Marty, church historian and columnist/editor for the "Christian Century" asked his readers to correctly identify the names selected. Remember now, that Marty writes for a journal that enjoys above-average readership in church groups, is widely circulated in libraries, and is followed carefully by professional theologians. Here is his survey:

Billy Graham	67 %	Andrew Greeley	3
Hans Kueng	5	Vine Deloria	3
James Gustafson	4	Abel Muzorewa	3
Juergen Moltmann	4	Helder Camara	2
Rosemary Reuther	4	Bernard Lonergan	2
David DuPlessis	3

It surely is no surprise that Billy Graham swept the field. (And we shall devote a follow-up column to the continued success and influence of the Man from Montreat.) What startles the reader, and must be a little dismaying to the editors and the other selections, is that they are nearly unknown, alas, almost invisible beyond the tiniest of minorities. As Marty says, it's not their fault, they didn't ASK to be chosen for this honorable confusion!

Some explanations are in order, for good people need not and ought not be put down by this low celebrity rating. The Rev. Hans Kueng was one of the young, brilliant theologians to emerge from Vatican II, to have significant influence on Pope John XXIII, and to remain in the forefront of much ecumenical thought and practice. To be interested in the Church tomorrow, is to read his books today.

Dr. James Gustafson represents the strong and historic tradition of Yale in the field of Christian ethics — the long and lasting line that was so well served by H. Richard Niebuhr and Liston Pope.

Juergen Moltmann brought out his Theology of Hope to an eager and ready audience, developing a large following at Princeton. Completing the Ivy League influence is Rosemary Reuther at Harvard. She is the source of some fresh thinking in Liberation Theology. Other names mentioned are mostly related to the Third World and, obviously, not as well known in the United States and Canada. Vine Deloria, American Indian scholar and advocate, may be better known in sociology than religion.

Any list leaves people out, individuals that not only count, but have clout. Muscle. Large and extensive audiences. The most glaring absence is that of Keith Miller. Miller writes for millions of people, and to ignore him is to forget a vast evangelical-main-line readership that makes every title a best-seller. His new book and cassette, "The Edge of Adventure" hardly stays in stock. William Stringfellow, another layman of power and persuasion, should be in the list of top five, not 11. Father Henri Nouveen fills the lecture halls wherever he goes. His book, "The Wounded Healer" is a volume worth owning and quoting.

Scripture: Malachi 3:1-4; Matthew 3:1-12; John 1:6-8

PREPARING THE WAY

Individuals since the beginning of history have looked ahead to the future, assuring themselves that everything will then be better.

All true religions are future-orientated as we see in today's study of both the Old and the New Testaments. We always look for those leaders to take us into improved living conditions.

In all instances a messenger is involved, one who will prepare the people for the savior. Our brief reference to Malachi reminds us that a nation at its lowest ebb looks for some individual to pull it out of its difficulties.

Malachi means "my messenger." We are not sure who wrote this brief book in the middle of the 5th century, yet we feel he was associated with the Temple in some capacity.

The morale of the Jewish settlement was at a low ebb. The family life was upset by divorce and adultery. Too many persons had become cynical, corrupt, and godless.

The messenger's duty is to prepare the people for the day when the Savior will arrive. The Temple must be ready; acceptable offerings must be on hand.

Although there would be centuries before the arrival of Christ, the people retained their hopes.

Now we switch to the New Testament and study the role of John the Baptist as a messenger. He is the "voice of one crying in the Wilderness," alerting all persons who would listen to the forthcoming time for the Savior to arrive.

John attracted large crowds for his sermons. The Scripture today from Matthew no doubt represents a summary of his many talks heard by persons who came from many communities.

John baptized all who repented of their sin. He reminded them that they could not claim special favor based on their birth. They had to be reborn, cleansing their lives of past sins.

In many ways it is remarkable that so many sought out John, especially when he told them that "He who is coming after me is mightier than I, whose sandals I am not worthy to carry."

John baptized with water; Jesus was to baptize with the Holy Spirit and fire. John stressed the democratic move of his mission. All men and women were welcomed, regardless of their prior activities.

We live on the hope of merging our lives with a greater one. Social struggles continue about us. Nationalism continues to grow, especially in our difficulties over importing petroleum products.

The problems John encountered remain. The church in his day was not democratic. Unfortunately, some churches today are anything from being democratic. Barriers remain that tend to shut out strangers in some churches.

Today we need another John the Baptist to bring us back to God. Such messengers can become disturbers of our peace. Too much shallowness of our religion remains in our lives.

Recently the Rev. Billy Graham told a group of publishers that their newspapers needed to crusade for higher morals, thus serving as messengers calling for a rebirth of the people.

Dr. Graham considered Watergate as one example of the nation's integrity. In comparing our people with those 2000 years ago, he said "Man is the same since the Garden of Eden. His flaws show up every day on the pages of the newspapers. The Bible considers man a lawbreaker by nature."

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale reminds us that "The world needs millions of acts of forgiveness to flush out hate, resentment and bitterness."

John the Baptist had a great mission to perform. He was the No. 2 man of his day, serving as the advance representative of the One who came to save the world.

THE BIBLE

164. Dedication of the Temple

Solomon called a convocation at Jerusalem of all the leaders of Isarel to witness the transferring of the Ark of the Covenant from the tabernacle in Zion to Solomon's newly-constructed temple. There was nothing in the temple except the two stone tablets Moses had placed at Mount Horeb.

But when the priests returned from the inner sanctuary, a bright cloud filled the temple—it was so bright that the priests had to return outside because the glory of the Lord filled the entire building. King Solomon blessed the people and delivered the invocation.

And Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven: And he said, Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart; Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and has fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day. WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has decided not to contest further an appellate court's reversal of a contempt conviction against Meyer Lansky, the one-time financial wizard of the underworld.

A Justice Department spokesman said Thursdy, "We feel it's not something we can take to the Supreme Court."

Lansky, 72, was convicted last year of failing to answer a subpoena issued by a federal grand jury in Miami and was sentenced to serve a year and a day in prison. He was freed on appeal bond and the conviction was reversed last June by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, which said the government failed to prove that Lansky willfully and contemptuously avoided compliance with the subpoena.

Executives see rise in rate of bankruptcy

Over nine in 10 (93.6 per cent) chief executives of 300 leading U. S. corporations expect a rise in the number of corporate bankruptcies over the next 18 months, according to an exclusive study published today by The Gallagher Presidents' Report. The weekly newsletter to company presidents finds that 89.9 per cent of the corporate heads agree the business community faces a cash crisis. The problem is heightened by the fact that nearly two-thirds (65.0 per cent) see the crisis continuing through 1975.

Presidents have shattered the tight money myth, The Report continues. Over three in five (64.2 per cent) of the GPR respondents think that high interest rates fail to curb the growth of inflation. Their thinking is borne out by the fact that nearly two- thirds (65.0 percent) were forced to tap the money markets this year while over seven in 10 (72.4 percent) see the 12 per cent prime as a deterrent to corporate bortrowing. Less than half (48.7 per cent) have been forced to postpone expansion plans, The Report adds.

Three in five (59.3 per cent) chief executives favor the sale of corporate stock directly to the public, according to the study. The disappearance of competitive money markets (cited by 55.7 per cent of the presidents in the study) is viewed as a major reason for the current high interest rates. Nearly two in five (39.2 per cent) oppose efforts by banks to "market" corporate stocks (see banks as already too powerful). 60.2 per cent are against repeal of the Glass-Steagall Act as a way to stimulate investor interest in the securities markets. Over four in five (81.7 per cent) favor enactment of legislation this year to improve the equity markets. A sliding scale of capital gains tax is viewed as the best route, followed by a reduction of the tax on dividend income and a decrease in the capital gains tax from 25 per cent to 20 per cent, The Report concludes.

Scouts to be honored

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Special recognition of all Eagle Scouts who live within the Southeast Missouri Council area of Boy Scouts of America is planned during the annual Eagle Scout Court of Honor to be held next Feb. 23 in Academic Hall on the Southeast Missouri State University campus.

Walter Hedrick of Sikeston, chairman of the council's advancement committee, is heading the effort to locate the names and addresses of all Eagles, regardless of whether they received the award in this council or in what year they received the award.

Stating that the Eagle award has been given by the national organization for 64 years, Hedrick remarked, "It is our idea to try to find out how many Eagles we have in the council and also to bring as many of them together as possible. We purposely aren't saying 'past' Eagle Scouts, because the Eagle award is for life."

Hedrick asks all Eagles or friends of Eagles to contact the Southeast Missouri Council Boy Scout Service Center in Cape Girardeau (Box 637), so as many names as possible can be placed on the invitation list.

"Even if the Eagle award holder cannot attend the Court of Honor, the council is interested in obtaining his name so a list can be printed in a program for the affair," Hedrick added.

The Court of Honor will be preceded by a dinner at a location to be announced. After the Court of Honor, a reception in honor of the current Eagle award winners will be hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Mark Scully. Dr. Scully is president of Southeast Missouri State University and has served for the past two years as president of the Southeast Missouri Boy Scout Council.

The Court of Honor is an annual affair held to honor all scouts in the 14-county Southeast Missouri Council who have attained the rank of Eagle during the preceding year. The number to be honored at the 1975 ceremony is not known at the present time.

A speaker and Eagle class sponsor will be announced in the near future.

The information needed by the council office on every Eagle in the area includes name, current address, year Eagle award was received and the name of the council in which the award was earned.

Sikeston's untried Bulldogs got their initial basketball test of the season in the Jackson Invitational Tournament Tuesday, but Skipper Garrett O'Dell's charges were little pressed in walloping Perryville in an opening contest, 63-17.

Two Sikeston High School gridders, end Bob Lohr and center Frank Edmiston, both of them instrumental in the Bulldogs' successful drive to their seventh successive Big Eight championship, today were named to all-state berths by the Missouri Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association. Planning director meets with court

BENTON — Ron Yersak, planning director of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission in Malden, appeared at Thursday's meeting of the Scott County Court to discuss the Community Development Act signed into law Aug. 22 by President Gerald Ford.

Yersak explained to the court that the law abolished several federal programs that had been administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, such as the urban renewal and model cities programs, and the money formerly used to finance those programs had been put into a block grant program similar to revenue sharing.

Missouri's share is presently $6 million, which will be distributed throughout the state, but the amount can be changed by Congress, Yersak said.

Any unit of local government is eligible for a share of the funds, as long as it meets certrain requirements, he added.

Yersak said there are four general requirements that altogether boil down to the need for a comprehensive plan to be submitted with the application for funds.

Yersak discussed the possibility of such a plan being drawn up for Scott County at an estimated cost of $10,000 to 13,000, which the county might be able to get back under the new funding program.

He said grants received through the new program may be used for anything state law allows, including matching federal funds with other federal funds. He said that much community development work may be financed with the funds, the only exceptions being new housing, hospitals, airports, libraries or nursing homes.

Oran Mayor Kenneth Ransdell came before the court and nominated Clinton Hodges to succeed the late Allen Wagoner as a member of the Oran Special Road District board of directors for the remainder of a term that expires next June.

The court approved the nomination and made the appointment.

Mrs. Jerome Schlitt of Oran Route One appeared before the court to complain that two mufflers had been torn off her car due to the poor condition of the railroad crossing near her home.

The court informed her it was not the responsibility of the Scott County Court but of Missouri Pacific Railroad.

The court did agree, however, to send a letter to the company asking a representative to meet with the court and Mrs. Schlitt.

camp development and other activities. The council will complete the year with estimated income exceeding expenditures. A financial report submitted at the meeting indicates that total expenses for the year will be about $121,328. Expected total income will be $121,784.

PORTAGEVILLE — A $60 fine was levied this morning in police court against Robert Joe Robinson for driving while drinking and careless and reckless driving.

5 treated

Five accident patients were treated and released Thursday in the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

BLOOMFIELD—A preliminary hearing for Herman and Flossie Pinnon of Dexter and Wayne Pinnon of Affton, which was scheduled to be heard in Stoddard County Magistrate Court Thursday, has been continued, according to Prosecuting Attorney Tom Baker.

The Pinnons are charged with breaking and entering and receiving stolen property. Mrs. Pinnon and a nephew, Wayne Pinnon are also charged with auto theft.

Wayne Pinnon was, until recently, a patient at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis where he was taken for treatment of injuries received in an explosion at the Trailways service station in Campbell.

Jerry Pinnon, 34, son of Herman and Flossie Pinnon, was killed in the explosion.

Rezoning suggestion approved

EAST PRAIRIE — A recommendation by the Planning and Zoning Commission for the rezoning of lot one, block one of the Chapman Addition from residential to commercial was approved Thursday night by the City Council.

The rezoning was necessary before a trailer park permit could be issued to Tom Ferrell of East Prairie, who is in the process of establishing a trailer park on north Kirkendall Street.

City Manager Frank Carter said Ferrell has met all ordinance requirements andrecommended that the permit be issued. A rezoning ordinance will be drawn up by City Attorney Fielding Potashnick to be presented to the council for its approval.

The council approved payment of $466.01, the city's pro-rated share of the fee for an attorney representing the Municipal Pooling Services, a commission of 20 Bootheel cities bidding to purchase Associated Natural Gas Co. facilities.

Also approved was payment of $196.50, the city's annual dues for Missouri Municipal League membership.

Upon request of an attorney representing Jim Owens, the council entered into the minutes of the meeting its approval of City ManagerCarter's rejection of a package liquor license for Owens Service Station on Washington Drive. A request that the reason for the rejection be entered in the minutes was denied.

Bulldogs bite Mules, 93-72

A balanced offense and another good defensive effort led the Sikeston Bulldogs to their second win in a row by a surprisingly easy 93-72 score, upsetting third seeded Poplar Bluff.

Six-foot-three center Marc Eaves scored 21 points, grabbed ten rebounds and heldhis man to five while leading a five-man double figure attack for the up-start Bulldogs. Vangalee West, enjoying his top effort as a starter, scored 19 points, despite missing at least a quarter as Coach Buddy Spears again used his bench liberally.

On the Poplar Bluff side of the ledger, 6-foot-3 Scott Harrell proved that the gridiron was not his only sporting home, canning 23 points and leading the game's rebounders with his total of eleven. He got offensive help from guard James Dement who pumped in 21 for the only other Mule in double figures.

Defense was again the name of the game, despite the final score. Unlike the Charleston encounter, where the Coach Buddy Spears gang used a tight defense to knock off the second seeded unit, Thursday's game was wide-open with a lot of Sikeston steals and 26 total turnovers for the Mules, who obviously were suffering from first-game jitters. The Bulldogs, unperturbed by a physical Poplar Bluff defense, hit nearly 62 percent from the floor, and gained their large margin of victory by canning 25 of 35 free throws.

Poplar Bluff beat themselves by missing 16 of their 28 charity tosses. Rebounds were mostly even, Sikeston holding a slight 40-37 edge.

Cool shooting by the Mules also contributed to the SHS victory. Jim King's troops hit just 37 percent from the floor, which compounded with the free throws, hampered the mistake-prone Mules.

By virtue of the easy victory Sikeston earns the right to oppose Lilbourn Saturday night at 9 p.m. in the championship game. In the three year history ofthe tournament, this is the first time Sikeston has played for first place.

Lilborun, Hayti claim wins

Top rated Lilbourn maintained its seat in the Sikeston Invitational Tournament Thursday night when they defeated New Madrid 77-59. Hayti moved into the consolation finals with a 55-54 win over the Dexter Bearcats.

Dexter opened the game by gaining the edge over the fourth seeded Hayti Indians. By steady playing, they ran ahead to hold a 32-29 halftime lead.

While the Indians were down, they were not yet ready to give up. Dexter found it tough going during the third period and saw the tables turned as they fell behind. Hayti kept the pace going and Dexter was forced to play catch-up ball but fell short of the mark to step out of the tourney.

Sylvester James and Wayne Robinson teamed for over half of the Indians total points with 19 and 14 respectively. Don Reynolds hit for 17 points to lead Dexter's scoring with Tim Holden pumping in 16.

Lilbourn had little difficulty with the New Madrid Indians during the second game. The Panthers had three players in double figures who helped carry them to the win -- Ernest McFerren and Det Treadwell scored 18 each and Frankie Robinson pitched in 15.

New Madrid fell behind the Panthers by seven in the opening quarter. They could not stay within close reach of the top ranked team and saw their hopes slowly dwindle away.

Harold Tucker and Steven Glenn hit for 15 points apiece with Craig Hunter dumping in 12. Ralph Tucker added 10.

Action will resume Saturday with Hayti facing the Charleston Blue Jays for fifth place. New Madrid will take on Poplar Bluff and Sikeston will go against Lilbourn.

Hawks rally

ORAN — The Kelly had to put together a fourth quarter rally Hawks had to put together a foureth quarter rally to overcome the Oran Eagles 83-78 offer Richland downed College High 52-46 in the losers bracket of the Oran invitational tournament Thursday night.

With Keith Campbell, Robert Taylor and Ronnie Hurst pumping in the points, Oran buzzed past the Kelly defense for 18 points in the first period while the Eagle defense was holding the Hawks to 13 and held the lead until late in the game.

Kelly's defense was unable to stop the scoring of this trio in the second period as well and Oran added another point to their lead and led 40-34 at the half.

The Eagles continued to put the pressure on the favored Hawks in the third period but began to run into foul trouble which eventually led to defeat. Oran built up a 12 point, 64-52, lead after the third period and seemed on their way to the first big upset of the tournament, but Kelly's press defense rose to the occasion and came roaring back to force the Eagles into enough turnovers to outscored the Eagles 31-14 in the last eight minutes of the game and come away the winner to advance into the finals Saturday night.

Oran outshot the Hawks from the field 39-35, but the free throws spelled the difference as Kelly put in 13 charity tosses to only six for the Eagles.

Campbell finished with 28 points, Hurst 20 and Taylor 22. Kelly featured a balanced scoring attack with Jamie Burger and Russ Mothershead hitting 18 apiece, Mike Brasher 17, Ron Schlosser 12 and Bob Felter 10.

College High surprised the Richland Rebels with their defense for the first two quarters but the Rebels came alive in the second half, particularly the fourth period and came away with the win.

The Preps, playing perhaps their best basketball in the past few years took a 14-10 first period lead and added four more to the margin in the second quarter to lead 26-18 at the half.

Richland began to control the game after the intermission and cut four points off the lead in the third quarter and took over the game in the final eight minutes.

Luke Cano scored 16 points to lead the Preps and Mim Clay dropped in 21 for the Rebels.

Rushin hits 33

BERNIE----Steve Rushin paced Bloomfield to a 71-69 overtime victory over Clarkton in semifinal round action of the 15th annual Bernie invitational basketball tournament Thursday night. Risco defeated Parma 64-53 to set up tonight's championship bout.

Rushin scored 33 points, eight coming in the three minute overtime period after notching four points late in the game to keep the Wildcats on even terms with the Reindeer.

Bloomfield charged out to a 20-10 first quarter lead and seemed headed for an easy win, but Clarkton revered the table in the second quarter and out-pointed the Wildcats by the same score as both teams went into the halftime break tied at 30-all.

Coach Joe Nichols Wildcats outmuscled the Reindeer in the third quarter and grabbed a three point lead, 51-48, but failed to hold as Clarkton defensed its way into a 63-63 tie with a 15-12 fourth period advantage.

Mike Stillman led CHS's offense with 18 points and got 17 point backing from Kenny Rickman and 16 from Ronnie Wilson.

Risco took a 12-10 lead over their neighboring rivals, Parma Pirates, and stayed ahead the rest of the way behind the 24 point leadership of all-stater Andy Smesler, who is quickly recovering from an injured hand. Steve Gibson led the Pirates scoring with 18 points.

DHS upsets Notre Dame

LUTESVILLE---Advance continued to roar past their opponents in the Woodland Invitational Tournament Thursday night as they turned back the host team 81-47. Mitch Stroder and Nate Crowden teamed up to pull out the win for the Delta Bobcats in double overtime against Notre Dame, 68-67. In the consolation game, Zalma won it 69-64 over Oak Ridge.

Woodland found it hard to keep up with the fast paced Hornets. Steady playing by the entire Advance team put the finish on Woodland's hopes of taking their own tourney.

The Hornets jumped out to a 19-8 first quarter lead giving them the advantage which carried them to the win. Wile the Cardinals put forth a determined dffort, it was not enough. Advance took a 38-25 lead into the locker room at half.

The second half proved to be of little difference for the Woodland squad and Advance rolled in 28 markers during the final period to put the icing on the cake.

High point man for the Hornets was David Tropf with 15. Dan Long followed with 14 and Steve Cookson with 12. Royce Young and David Cummins both contributed 10. Woodland's Billy Long hit for 12 points and Carl Black 11 to round out double figure scoring.

In the second game, the number two and three ranked teams battled it out for a shot at Advance. Game play see-sawed but Notre Dame gained control first half half play holding a slim 20-19 halftime edge. During third quarter, the Delta Bobcats moved out in front but Notre Dame came back in the fourth to go ahead.

In the remaining seconds of the game Mitch Stroder hit for two free throws to bring the game to a 59-59 tie. In the first overtime, both teams hit for four points each with Stroder once again putting in the tying basket. The second overtime saw Delta pick up a single point on the Bulldogs to move into the championship berth.

Nate Crowden dumped in 35 points to earn high scoring honors for the Delta team. Mark Buessink dumped in 31 and Greg Buessink 10 for Notre Dame.

It was a tight game between the Zalma squad and Oak Ridge but the Bulldogs managed to hold off the Oak Ridge team to capture the win. At the end of the first quarter, Zalma held only a one point edge but widened the gap during second period play and at the half they held a 47-39 lead.

Oak Ridge added a little steam in the third quarter and moved ahead, but Zalma was up for the win and in the final period came back to take the consolation win.

Matchmaker Sam Silverman signed Poirier Thursday to face Vinnie Curto of Boston and Miami after Licata withdrew because of a back ailment. However, the Massachusetts Boxing Commission will limit the bout to nine rounds, instead of 10, because of Poirier's age.

Poirier, a classy boxer, has won all 22 pro starts. Curto, only 18, has an 18-1 pro record, losing only to world middleweight champion Rodrigo Valdes on a 10-round decision.

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Karl Anderson of Greene, Maine, and Ron Biedermann of Stowe, Vt., failed to finish their first run and were eliminated Thursday in the giant slalom of the First Snow Ski Tournament, the opening race of the season for the World Cup.

FUKUOKA, Japan (AP) — Olympic marathon champion Frank Shorter of the United States is favored to win the ninth annual Fukuoka international marathon race Sunday for the fourth straight year against a field of 96 runners. The 27-year-old distance star is unbeaten in international races since he first won the Fukuoka event in 1971.

The 26-mile, 385-yard race is sanctioned by the Inernational Amateur Athletic Foundation and will be run through the streets of Fukuoka City, 900 miles south of Tokyo.

GENERAL

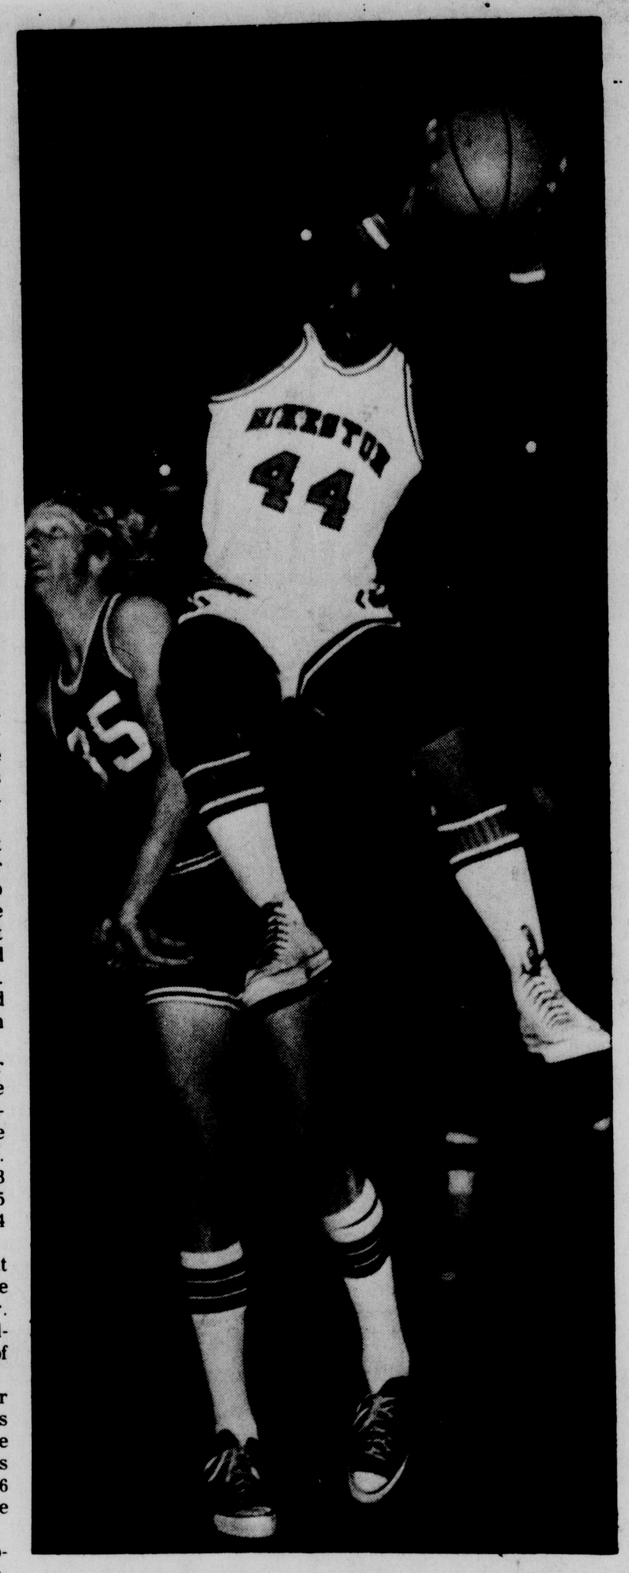
BROOKLINE, Mass. — Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, the grand old lady of tennis who won the first of 44 national championships in 1909, died at the age of 88.



'Do the twist'

Vanglee West (44) twists his way past Poplar Bluff's Robert Dodd (35) during semifinal round action in the Sikeston invitational basketball tournament Thursday night. The Bulldogs marked up their second upset of the event with a rousing 93-72 win over the third seeded Mules.

Baseball expansion

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Willie Davis is going to the Texas Rangers while New Orleans and Seattle are headed for the big leagues.

Davis, a veteran outfielder dealt Thursday by the Montreal Expos to the Rangers, will get there first and it has nothing to do with his swiftness of foot.

The target date of 1976 seems likely for major league baseball franchises in this host city of the winter meetings and Seattle. That indication came from baseball officials Thursday after day-long sessions of the American and National League club owners, both in separate and joint meetings.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and a newly formed joint major league expansion committee met with New Orleans Superdome officials for 1½ hours Thursday. No other expansion hopefuls met with Kuhn and his committee Thursday and the Commissioner termed the session with New Orleans people significant.

This city's multimillion dollar Superdome is expected to be completed early next year, a factor in its favor.

"We received indications that New Orleans will have a major league baseball franchise by 1976," said Bill Connick, a Superdome commission official.

The green light for Seattle was indicated in American League President Lee MacPhail's remark that "we have assured Seattle that it will obtain a franchise in some fashion."

Both Kuhn and MacPhail were otherwise vague about expansion or the possible movement of such franchises as Baltimore, which is up for sale, and Oakland, which is suffering from poor attendance despite three straight world championships.

Kuhn shrugged off proposals by the National League's influential Walter O'Malley that a third league be formed to encompass new franchises and-or that major league baseball purchase the Baltimore and Oakland franchises.

Kuhn listed Seattle, New Orleans, Toronto and Washington as having the best chances for major league franchises in the future because they either had stadiums built or new ones under way. The fact that Seattle has pending litigation against the American League since its franchise was moved to Milwaukee after only one season, 1970, has enhanced its chances.

On the trade front, only two lesser deals were completed Thursday in addition to Davis moving to Texas for infielder Pete Mackinin and pitcher Don Stanhouse. The interlegaue trading deadline expires at midnight, CST, tonight.

Screw worms cause worry

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I recently read in the San Antonio News an article that frightened me half to death. It was about screw worms in Texas. The article stated screw worms affected people as well as animals. It stated there were 8,900 cases treated in Texas last year and 75 per cent of these were in South Texas and the San Antonio area.

We plan to retire and make our home in San Antonio so you can understand why I might be somewhat concerned with this problem.

I am especially interested in knowing who and how screw worms attack. What is the incidence and what area seems to be most affected? How can they be recognized and controlled? How can we protect ourselves from contact with them? If they should attack a person what is the percentage of fatality?

We have two children and since our possible retirement sites are limitless, I wouldn't want to make any move that may endanger their lives in any way.

DEAR READER — Relax! That article was about the incidence in animals and people. I talked to the County Health Department in San Antonio, and they confirmed my impression that human infestation was quite rare, including in San Antonio. About three years ago there were 10 cases in humans. There was also one death near San Antonio. The rest of the problems were in animals, not humans.

Screw worms are the larvae from the screw worm fly. The fly lays its eggs in a cut or injured area. The eggs hatch and produce larvae. Being raised on the farm, I treated several cases in farm animals when I was a boy. If detected and treated early the animal doesn't have any problems. The cattle on a large ranch or animals not under close supervision are not so lucky.

Humans get screw worms the same way. Most of the 10 cases were in children with scalp problems from lack of hygiene. The scratched area provided a place for the fly to lay a few eggs. In better circumstances human infections do not occur.

I have seen only two cases and both were in Kansas, not Texas. In both instances the victims were inclined to drink excessively and would be lying outdoors in a stupor. While in this state the flies entered the nose and left their eggs.

So, unless you are going to be lying around somewhere unconscious for some reason, such as from too much alcohol, I think you need not fear any problems at all from screw worms.

The screw worm problem concerns farmers and ranchers, and there are national programs for fly control to protect livestock. That is why it is of public interest, not because it is a significant health problem for people.

San Antonio is a lovely town and entirely safe healthwise. If the screw worm problem is all that alarms you then you have nothing to worry about.

Dear Santa

Dear Santa,

Well here I am again. It doesn't seem like it has been a year since I written to you. but it has Santa. I am four years old Dec. 18th and my name is Jerri Lynn. I have been better this year than I was last year. I was pretty small last year. For Christmas Santa, I would like a Rub-adub doll. So she can take a bath with me and clothes for her. A tractor and trailer. Iron and iron board, mop and broom. So I can help my mommy clean house. Remember all the other little boys and girls and most of all, my Mommie and Daddy. They love me so much and are so good to me. And I love them. Remember my grandma Ramsey at Chaffee and my Grandma Harrison here in Oran. Please — Santa bring something for them.

Santa, Mommie will make homemade cookies for you, so you will find milk and cookies on the table. We'll see you next year. Hope you and Mrs. Santa a very Merry Christmas.

Love you lots
Jerri Lynn Harrison
Oran, Mo.

P.S. Santa if you can bring my Mommie a new piano. So we can play and sing in church. Santa I am a little girl who loves Jesus. Don't you.

Dear Santa,

My name is Brenda Burns. I'm six years old. I live at 635 Branum.

I want a Baby Alive, Organ and some new clothes.

Santa I will leave you some candy and milk on the table.

Love you
Brenda Burns

Dear Santa,

I would like for yu to bring me a magic knit, a jean suit, a watch and two scrap books.

Thank you
Melinda Miller

Dear Santa

Terror mocks idea of Holy Land peace

Fragile barriers laboriously constructed to avert new and calamitous war in the Middle East are menaced today by the deadly cycle of terror and counterterror.

A specter out of the past, organized terror seems to mock the very idea of peace in the tortured Holy Land. Too, there are doleful paradoxes in a comparison of the terror behind today's Arab demand for a Palestinian state and the pre-1948 Zionist drive for a Jewish nation.

Is there a chance the terror will abate now, in view of the current stance of Yasir Arafat, the Palestine Liberation Organization chief? Evidently the wide recognition given his PLO by the United Nations lately has impelled its leader to seek a look of respectability and moderation; of relying less on terror and more on negotiation and political maneuvering.

But given even the best intentions, with the momentum they now have, today's terrorists would be difficult to rein. In any case, the Israelis don't believe Arafat and they say his military organization, Al Fatah, is responsible for the latest terror raid into Israel.

Because of a long and complex history of violence, it is just about impossible to make precise comparisons between Jewish methods of pre-1948 days and Arab terror techniques of today.

However, there are ironic similarities as well as apparent differences.

Before 1948 a variety of Jewish underground organizations in Palestine traversed the political spectrum. Today, the Arabs have a variety of such organizations of their own, across the spectrum.

Like the pre-1948 Jews, today's Arabs generally are united on goals but divided on methods. Before 1948, Haganah, as Zionism's paramilitary arm, tended to zero in on specific British political, administrative and military targets and professed to shun spectacular random terror such as that carried out by two smaller groups, Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Gang.

Today's PLO under Arafat, like Haganah, presents itself as the centrally organized and disciplined military arm of a political movement. It has run into expressed disagreement from smaller, extreme Arab guerrilla outfits who suggest that Arafat looks too non-violent and too potentially moderate.

There are differences between pre-1948 and now. One is that today innocent bystanders seem to be in much more peril. Random acts of terror include such Arab extremist acts as bombing and shooting up crowded airports, blasting buildings in European capitals, holding hostages and skyjacking passenger aircraft, the latter a relatively new phenomenon of the era of mass jet travel.

Frankly speaking

Lincoln's dream is goal of Congress

By THOMAS F. EAGLETON
U. S. Senator—Missouri

A government which is truly of, by and for the people was Lincoln's dream, and it is still the goal of the current Congress.

Another step toward that goal was made recently when Congress overrode the President's veto of amendments to strengthen the Freedom of Information Act of 1966.

The original act was supposed to open for inspection -- by any person -- government agency rules, opinions, orders, records, and proceedings. The only major exceptions to this were matters involving national defense or foreign policy, trade secrets, inter-agency memos, personnel files of which disclosure would constitute invasion of persnal privacy, and criminal investigatory files.

Bureaucrats Against It

Yet the bureaucratic departments have long fought this Act and have undermined it through ingenius methods -- high fees for finding the documents, long delays, and a knack for losing things in the shuffle.

Some agencies have even failed to provide index files and master listings of their documents -- and then accused inquirers of fishing for information. Others have put non-classified material in with classified material and then claimed it couldn't be separated.

Regardless of the method, the motive was the same -- to keep away from the public information which might be embarassing to the agency or to the Administration.

Public Deserves To Know

But this attitude is no longer being accepted by the American people. The people have the right to know what their government is doing and how it is operating. It is only with this knowledge that agencies can effectively be held accountable for any mismanagement or incompetence.

The new amendments speed up the process of providing information by requiring the agency to either answer inquiries within 10 days or to appeal the request within 20 days. They also allow the courts to decide whether a document which is classified "secret" is properly classified, or whether there is a reasonable basis to reverse the classification.

Secrecy in government is nothing new. There has always been the tendency of the bureaucrat to cover up his mistakes and there has always been a need to keep some few things truly secret for the sake of national security.

In the past, the public tended not to care about the little bureaucratic mistakes as long as things worked right most of the time. The government, after all, was hired to take care of public affairs while the public goes about its private business, and the public didn't want to be bothered with the details.

But the astonishing secrecy with which the Nixon Administration carried out its business did bother the public. The past election was evidence of this.

I called for a strengthening of the Freedom of Information Act nearly three years ago. Although it took a governmental credibility crisis to bring it about, it is my hope that these amendments will close the lopholes which allowed bureaucrats to circumvent the spirit of the law. It is my hope that the people's records and documents will really be made available to the people.

ROBERT FULLER
Dr. Kelly Brackett in
'Emergency' Saturdays, NBC
NBC Television Network
(In Color, 7-8 p.m., CST0

According to legend, most cowboys ride off into the sunset to live happily ever after but Robert Fuller, of NBC-TV's "Emergency!", rode off into the Emergency Room of "Rampart General Hospital" where he plays a highly professional physician.

In September, 1974, "Dr. Kelly Brackett" will be back with his stethoscope, and former cowboy actor Robert Fuller couldn't be happier. After years of "Laramie," "Wagon Train," and assorted cowboy roles, Fuller was delighted to get away from the dust, the dirt and the saloon fights which studded his TV appearances. Happily, his fans respond even more enthusiastically to him in the live-action film series than they did in his earlier shows.

Born in Troy, N.Y., the son of a naval officer and a choreographer, Fuller's childhood was spent in Florida and Illinois before the family moved to California. He served in the Army in Korea as a sergeant and returned to the U.S. in 1955. His first major acting job was as a member of Richard Boone's repertory company. Later, he traveled to New York to join Sanford Meisner's acting school.

Upon his return to California, he took a job as an extra in the film "Friendly Persuasion," starring Gary Cooper. In 1959 he won the starring role in NBC-TV's "Laramie."

His next series was NBC-TV's "Wagon Train," and later he was a guest star in various network shows and had starring roles in motion pictures and theatre productions.

He and his wife Patty (whom he married in December, 1962) and their children, Robert Jr. (10) and Christine (9), live in the Toluca Lake section of North Hollywood, Calif.

Features to be shown on television for the first time will include dramas and comedies starring and featuring prominent names in the entertainment field.

Early last year, NBC Television and Walt Disney Productions announced firm production plans that assure the Emmy and Peabody Awards-winning series a place on the NBC-TV schedule at least through the 1975-76 season.

DEMOND WILSON
Lamont Sanford in 'Sanford and Son'
Fridays, NBC Television Network
In Color, 7-7:30 pm CST)

Demond Wilson's mother admired Bill Robinson and wanted her son to grow up to be like the famous dancer. But the family lived in a Harlem flat where the floors were covered with linoleum--and tap dancing destroyed the linoleum. So little Demond was put in the bathroom, where the floor was covered with a harder, mosaic type tile, and told to dance.

"I didn't mind. I thought I was rather lucky. At the age of 4, my mother took me to try out for a part in the Broadway play 'Green Pastures' starring William Marshall. I got the part--playing a cherub in heaven. And I really believed Marshall was God. How many kids get to be in a play with God?:

After Wilson outgrew his mother's prodding he enrolled in Hunter College in New York where he studied drama and the arts. Two years later he dropped out to make some money, then he was drafted and sent to Vietnam.

After being discharged, Wilson tried show business again and went on tour with "Boys in the Band," a play with a homosexual theme. "That was the one thing my folks weren't too happy about," said Wilson, "They were relieved when I got in my old car and drove to Hollywood."

Then things happened fast. He won a part in "The Organization" starring Sidney Poitier, and then a role in a segment of "All in the Family" as a burglar. It was that role which led to his audition for the part of Lamont Sanford.

Baseball Detour;Country Stardom

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Charley Pride has made 22 record albums and 12 of them are gold. He's one of the top country artists in the United States today and the first black performer to make it as a top country artist. His "Mississippi Cotton Picking Delta Town" is No. 2 on the best-selling country chart of Nov. 2.

But, interesting as it is to hear him talk about today, it's even more interesting to hear him talk about the twists in the path to stardom. Maybe that's because he started out to become a Jackie Robinson and wound up instead an Ernest Tubb.

Pride was born in Sledge, Miss., and picked cotton with his parents, seven brothers and three sisters. "My Dad is retired now; he doesn't ever have to work any more. I got him taken care of, in Lambert, Miss., 16 miles from where I was born."

Pride's mother named him Charl Frank Pride and the year she died, 1956, she got copies of the birth certificates for all her children and found the midwife had written Charley instead of Charl. "I was in the Army so I had my name changed. When I was ready to be discharged, they had some embezzlement at the camp and they saw in the files I had two names. It took me two or three days to get it all straightened out."

Pride played baseball in the now-defunct Negro American League. "I pitched and played outfield.

"Two players in that league who went on to prominence were Hank Aaron and Ernie Banks. Ernie went straight from the Kansas City Monarchs to the Chicago Cubs. I remember he hit one off me, a home run, in Salina, Kan., that's still going. And I remember striking him out in Pine Bluff, Ark., three years later. I'm not a boastful person, but it's a fact I hit over 300 everywhere I played.

"Jackie Robinson, and later Willie Mays, used to play their all-stars against the Negro American League all-stars. I've got a clipping, I was the winning pitcher 4-3 in relief, in that game in 1956, just before I went in the Army. It's the first time the Negro League all-stars ever won."

One team which cut Pride from its roster told him to go to East Helena, Mont., because Anaconda Mining's zinc smelter kept 18 jobs open for ball players, regulating their days off so they could have a team. "I called my wife and told her I'd be making 20 bucks a day; I'd never made that much in my life.

"One day a guy that ran a club that had music on Thursdays when they had stock car racing called my foreman to see if he'd let me off two hours early to sing there. He'd heard me singing at ballgames over the PA system, when I'd be having a good night at the plate. I'd like to say I sang the National Anthem but I really did 'A Hole in the Bottom of the Sea.' My foreman said okay — I worked 3 to 11 p.m. — and I rented me a guitar and amplifier and sang country.

"In 1961 I went to spring training with the Angels in Southern California. I tried to look good too quick and I looked worse and worse. The pitching coach told me I didn't have a major league arm. I went to Gene Autry and told him I knew somebody had to help him once, so please don't send me home. He said he didn't run the team. They sent me home with a tuna fish sandwich and an orange.

CHARLEY PRIDE

"In 1972 I went to the first day of spring training at the same park with the Brewers and I remembered 1961 and how desperate I was.

MARTIN MILNER
Officer Pete Malloy
in 'Adam-12' Tuesdays,
NBC Television Network
(In Color, 7-7:30 p.m. CST)

Martin Milner's television success keeps him in the driver's seat. In high gear, Milner begins the seventh year of "Adam-12" behind the wheel of a patrol car as Officer Pete Malloy.

Adding to the four years of driving in TV series "Route 66," that's a lot of happy mileage for television viewers and Milner.

A native of Detroit, he moved to Seattle where he attended grade school. While a teen-ager, he moved to North Hollywood, Calif. In high school he prepared for his acting career by hiring an acting coach, which led to his acquiring an agent. He later studied theatre arts at the niversity of Southern California.

Milner's first major motion picture role came in 1947 when he played John Day, the second oldest son in "Life With Father."

Shortly after finishing the film, he was stricken with polio. There were periods of despair but he recovered completely after being bedridden for a year.

In 1952 his career again was interrupted, this time by induction into the Army for a two-year hitch. He was assigned to direct 20 training films. In addition, Milner served as master of ceremonies for a touring show unit based at Fort Ord, Calif.

While still in the Army he was cast in "The Long Gray Line," the 1955 film starring Tyrone Power and Maureen O'Hara.

But 1957 was probably the momentous year of his life. Milner married actress-singer Judy Jones; he won an important role in the Hecht-Hill-Lancaster production. "Sweet Smell of Success," and he played a major part in the Warner Bros. picture "Marjorie Morningstar."

As Tod Stiles in "Route 66" three years later, Milner traveled all over the country while doing the show.

When "Route 66" ended he returned to motion pictures and gueststar roles on TV until his starring role in "Adam-12."

Four years ago Milner decided that ranch life, away from the bustling city, would be ideal. He purchased a 24-acre plot with 2,500 avocado trees near Fallbrook, Calif., about 90 miles from Hollywood, and built a house which he designed.

DAVID HARTMAN
Star of 'Lucas Tanner'
Wednesdays, NBC Television Network (In Color, 8-9 p.m.,CST)

David Hartman figures you ought to like what you do for a living so he zeroed in on three of his favorite pursuits--communication, music and athletics--and wove a multi-faceted, enjoyable way of life for himself.

Born on May 19 in Pawtucket, R.I., Hartman attended Mt. Hermon Preparatory School and by graduation time had earned seven letters in sports. He was offered baseball contracts by the then-Boston Braves and the Philadelphia Phillies.

However, David chose to continue his schooling. "I entered Duke University for a number of reasons. Partially because of the fine music and liberal arts program, partially because of baseball and, finally, because I wanted a change of scenery from New England."

Immediately upon his discharge from the Air Force (as a 2nd Lieutenant(, Hartman enrolled in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. He appeared in a number of off-Broadway musicals and in summer stock prior to signing for the role of Rudolph, the singing waiter, in the original Broadway cast of "Hello, Dolly!"

Some 800 performances later, Hartman joined the original cast of "The Yearling." He also toured with the Harry Belafonte Singers and followed with a year in the national company of "My Fair Lady." Hartman also was in the off-Broadway revival of "Best Foot Forward."

ALL PROGRAMS ARE SUBJECT TO CHANGE

SPEAKING OF THE MOVIES
By ROBERT KLINGE

When Robin Lee Graham was 16 years old, he got in his boat and went sailing. Five years and 30,000 miles later he came home, the youngest person in history to sail around the world alone. By the time Graham was 21 he had spent nearly a quarter of his life alone on his 23-foot sloop called "Dove" Why did he do it?

"When I asked him, he didn't have the answer. All he said was 'I thought it would be fun,' " says Gregory Peck, the producer of the true-life film "The Dove."

When Gregory Peck was 55 years old, he got on a plane and flew to Fiji to begin scouting locations for "The Dove." Two years and 60,000 miles later, he came home. His first film as a producer was finished. By the time Peck was 57 he had spent nearly a third of his life as one of the biggest stars in Hollywood. Why did he make "The Dove"?

"My first reaction was that here was a story that entertained and moved me," he said. "I found I could identify with both the boy and his father, who encouraged him to make the trip. There was a love story in it as well. I recognized it as touching and funny and human. It struck me that here was the kind of thing that everybody wants to see. I simply wanted a contemporary film for all ages and they're hard to come by these days."

It was a natural for Peck. As producer he assumed the role of commander of an international crew of 40 professionals. Nine identical sloops had to be built and stationed at various points around the world. Five identical cats needed to be trained. Then there was the logistical problem of transporting 11,400 pounds of highly sensitive equipment. It all sounds vaguely reminiscent, like something out of one of Peck's other roles in "The Guns of Navarone" or "Twelve O'Clock High." Only this time the challenges were real.

Then there's Charles Jarrott, the director of "The Dove." Why did he do it?

"The Dove' makes a positive statement about a boy who set out to do something and succeeded. It's not a Disney story; there is some abrasion to it," he said.

Besides, Jarrott is at home with the filming of epic adventures. Before "The Dove," Jarrott had directed "Anne of the Thousand Days," "Mary ,Queen of Scots" and "Lost Horizon."

The cameraman's motives may be a little easier to understand. He is Sven Nykvist, the award-winning Swedish cinematographer.

Nykvist has a cozy relationship with peculiar notions. He became internationally famous as Ingmar Bergman's cameraman. He has been responsible for the photography in nearly all of Bergman's films. Nykvist won an Academy Award as Best Cinematographer for Bergman's classic, "Cries and Whispers." His camera work on "The Dove" represents one of the few times Nykvist has worked for any director other than Bergman.

Still, you have to wonder what kind of thing would lure anybody to brave the sort of 40-foot waves and gale force winds that the cast and crew encountered during the filming of "The Dove."

Joseph Bottoms plays the part of Robin Graham in "The Dove." The part of his lover and future wife, Patti Ratteree, is played by Deborah Raffin. And in the case of the film's two young stars there was no mystery. For Bottoms and Raffin it was the chance of a lifetime.

It is the first film for Joseph Bottoms, who is a native of Santa Barbara, Calif. He has done community theater in his home town and is the younger brother of Timothy Bottoms, star of "The Last Picture Show" and recently "The White Dawn."

Deborah Raffin, 20, also a native of southern California, was a successful fashion model for several years before her first film appearance in "40 Carats." "The Dove" is her second film.

But eventually you have to come back to Robin Graham, who started it all. You have to wonder. Getting out of bed, cleaning his room, mowing the lawn: those are the usual chores a middle-class teenager undertakes. But sailing around the world....

Perhaps the simplest answer is the best. He had a mountain to climb and he climbed it. It only looks crazy to people on the ground.

Unemployment at 13-year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate leaped to 6.5 per cent in November, its highest level in 13 years, the government reported today.

The Labor Department said the number of unemployed Americans rose by 482,000 last month to a total of 5,975,000.

At the same time, total employment in the nation dropped by nearly 800,000 last month to 85.7 million, virtually wiping out the entire increase in the number of jobs over the past year.

Massive layoffs in the automobile industry and job losses in electrical equipment and textile industries and retail trade accounted for most of the job losses last month, the department said.

The November increase in the unemployment rate — from 6 per cent in Octber — was the biggest monthly jump since the November-December period in 1960 when joblessness rose from 6.1 to 6.6 per cent.

The last time unemployment hit 6.5 per cent was in October of 1961, a recessionary year.

The sharp increase in unemployment last month, a reflection of the nation's deepening recession, is expected to spur changes in Ford administration economic policy. It also is likely to speed congressional passage of new legislation to aid the unemployed.

A measure approved Thursday by the House Ways and Means Committee would provide an additional $1 billion in emergency jobless benefits over the next year.

The Labor Department said most of the increase in unemployment last month was accounted for by workers who were either laid off or fired from their last jobs. Over the past year, unemployment has risen by almost 1.9 million, with the portion of job losers among the unemployed increasing from 37 per cent to 47 per cent.

The November unemployment figures were based on data gathered before the middle of the month. Thousands more workers have been laid off since then, in part due to slumping auto sales and the nationwide coal strike. This will push the jobless rate for December still higher.

This trend was indicated Thursday in the Labor Department's weekly report on unemployment insurance benefits. The report said the number of initial claims for jobless benefits increased by 81,600 during the week ending Nov. 23 and that 42 states reported higher volumes.

A year ago, 1,430,000 workers were receiving unemployment insurance benefits.

The November increase in the jobless rate represented the third monthly spurt in a row. After taking 10 months to rise to 5.4 per cent from last October's 3½-year low of 4.8 per cent, the rate jumped to 5.8 per cent in September and then climbed an additional two-tenths of a per cent in October.

Chairman Alan Greenspan of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said earlier this week that industry layoffs, especially in the auto industry, were worse than anticipated. He predicted that the unemployment rate will continue upward until it reaches "something over 7 per cent" in the third quarter of 1975.

House burns; children saved

DEXTER — Fire destroyed the Vernon Belcher home at 1212 Pine Street at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, but four children who were in the home were carried to safety.

Mrs. Belcher, who was at home with the small children when the fire was discovered, carried the children from the home before flames destroyed it. She took them to the home of a neighbor. Neighbors and passersby helped her to get the children out of the home. No one was injured.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined but it was believed to have started in the attic of the one-story dwelling.

"I saw and smelled smoke and ran to the bedroom," Mrs. Belcher sobbed as she stood in the yard, watching the flames destroy the home.

"I ran to the children, and then ran for help," she explained.

Her husband is an employee of IXL Handle Company in Dexter and is also a musician. A large amount of musical equipment, including amplifying equipment, was in the home but much of it was carried out. Some of it was damaged by smoke and heat, however.

Little else of value was saved.

The flames spread quickly throughout the house, despite the fact that firemen responded quickly. But the flames had spread so quickly that by the time firemen arrived much of the main portion of the house was aflame and it was spread rapidly.

Belcher said the contents were not covered by insurance.

Sikeston man to head SeMo Scout Council

He succeeds Dr. Mark Scully, president of Southeast Missuri State University in Cape Girardeau.

Other officers are Francis Lewis of Cape Girardeau, vice president and assistant treasurer; Dr. George Ladyman of Poplar Bluff, vice president; Lehman Godwin of Dexter, vice-president Ken Myles of Cape Girardeau, council commissioner; J. P. Tlapek of Cape Girardeau, treasurer; James Lansmon of Cape Girardeau, assistant treasurer; and Wendell Black of Cape Girardeau, assistant treasurer.

Dr. R. A. Ritter Sr., of Cape Girardeau was elected national council representative. Twenty-four men were named to the council advisory committee, 44 were named council members at large and 88 were named to the executive board for 1975.

Hedrick has been an adult Scouter in the Southeast Missouri Council since 1967. He has served as district chairman, district advancement chairman, council advancement chairman and council vice presdident.

He is a member of Sikeston Rotary Club, First United Methodist Church board of directors and is an adult Sunday School teacher. He served as a Lt. Commander in the U.S. Navy in World War II.

He received his Bachelor of Science of Education from Frostburg State University in Frostburg, Md. and his Master of Business Administration from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. His wife, Lois,is a fourth grade teacher at Lee Hunter elementary school in Sikeston. They have a son and two daughters.

Max Hatfield of Kansas City, area director of the North Central Region, talked briefly about a Scout and his council, noting that special emphasis must be given to training capable leaders in scouting. He said the best training program offered to adult leaders is the woodbadge course and encouraged more adults to take advantage of it.

He said the council's purpose is not to offer scouting to every boy and girl who want it, but to provide a program that will build character and citizenship for all who participate in scouting. Hatfield was executive of the Southeast Missouri Council in 1943. The North Central Region, which he now directs, includes 16 councils in Missouri and Southern Illinois.

Committee chairmen reported that 1974 was a good year for the SeMo Council in advancement, leadership training, camping,

Malden voters to decide on 1-cent sales tax

MALDEN — Voters of Malden will again be asked to approve a one-cent sales tax in a special election to be held Tuesday. It will be the second time within six months the proposal has been submitted to voters.

On June 11 the sales tax was defeated by a narrow margin of 652 to 604.

The decision to call the election is an attempt to meet a deadline for obtaining matching funds for a Federal Environmental Development Administration grant. Malden has applied for 1.7 million grant to provide additional sewer and water lines, sewage disposal plants and access roads to the industrial park.

Malden share of the project is $300,000. City officials must come up with ways and means to finance the amount before EDA will process the application.

The application must be approved Jan. 1 or else be resubmitted and placed on a waiting list.

Marshal Dees arrests son for possession

NEW MADRID — City Marshall Virgil "Flip" Dees Thursday night arrested his son Bobby, 21, for possession of more than 35 grams of marijuana at young Dees's apartment on Highway 61 South. Another youth Ricky Drake, 19, was arrested simultaneously in trailer 55 at Cabana Courts on Highway 61 North for possession of marijuana exceeding 35 grams, two bottles of pills and paraphernalia for administering narcotics were found.

Armed with search warrant, Marshal Dees was accompanied by New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Fred Roe and highway patrol Trooper Myron Houser to the apartment at 11 p.m., where they found and confiscated several plastic bags containing marijuana.

Marshal Dees, who reported the arrest to The Daily Standard today, said the raid and arrest of his sonwas a hard thing to do. He said, however, that it has been equally difficult for him to arrest other young people on marijuana charges when he suspected his son also was involved.

Young Dees waived a preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court this morning and has been released under

City announces trash collection schedule

City manager Charles Church today announced the trash collection schedule which will go into effect Jan. 2, 1975.

The schedule provides for twice weekly collection in the city.

The routes and schedules are as follows: Mondays and Thursdays, area one, east of South New Madrid Street, south of East Malone Avenue and West of St. Johns Drainage Ditch; area two, east of St. Johns Ditch, South of East Malone Avenue and Albert Street, west of the Miner City limits.

Tuesdays and Fridays, area one, north of West Malone Avenue, west of North New Madrid Street; Area two, Sough of West Malone Avenue, and West of South West Street.

Wednesdays and Saturdays, area one, east of North New Madrid Street, North of East Malone Avenue, west of North Ingram Road; area two, South of West Malone Avenue, East of South West Street, west of South New Madrid Street; North of Murray Lane.

Maps showing the routes and schedules will be on public display at the City Administrative Building, Board of Municipal Utilities office and the three city banks.

Collections will begin at 7 a.m. daily so refuse should be out at that time to insure pickup, Church said.

Refuse will be collected from alleys, except for the deadends where the truck would have to back in or out of the alley.

In all other cases, the residential collection will be from the curb, unless arrangements are made with the hauler, James Carlisle. Carlisle will have a telephone installed in the city soon, and can now be reached by calling the City Administrative Building.

City regulations require refuse to be in containers no larger than the 35 gallons with tight-fitting lids. Plastic bags and 55 gallon barrels are not permitted.

There will be no trash collection on July 4, Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's Day.

When a regular collection day falls on a holiday, the hauler will pick up on the next regular collection day, Church said.

There is no limit on the number of cans per collection. Branches will be collected if they are tied in bundles not exceeding 48 inches in length and 24 inches in diameter.

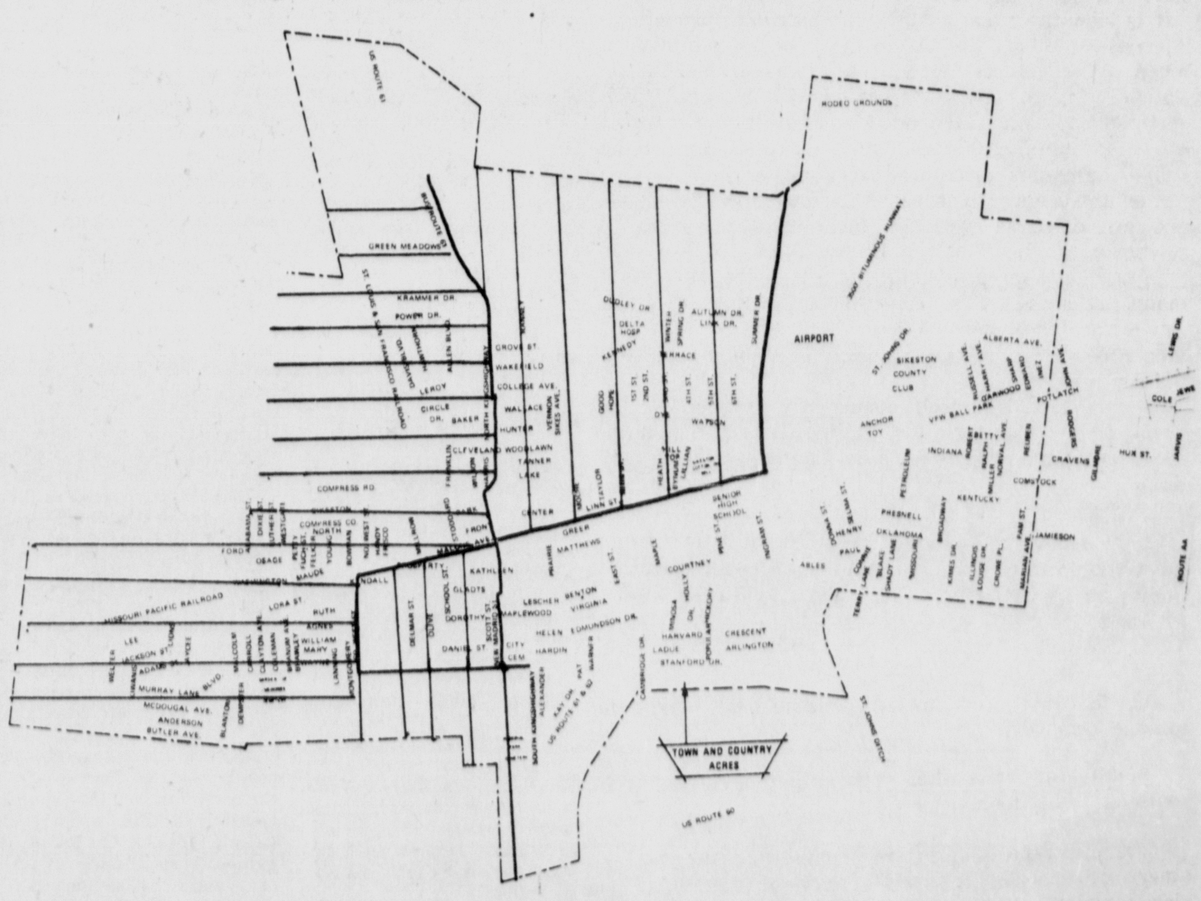
Apartment houses in excess of four units are not covered by the residential collection contract since they are considered commercial units.

Beginning Jan. 2, no open burning will be allowed in the city except for burning leaves, ceremonial fires, agricultural fires and fire department training fires.

All complaints concerning billing or collection should be made to the city. City officials will forward all collection complaints to Carlisle. The city is handling the complaints to insure good coordination and control over the service.

The $2.91 per month refuse hauling fee will be added to the water bill beginning in January.

As a public service, Carlisle will also pickup any 55-gallon containers at no cost during the first week of collection.



City-wide collection days shown

The city refuse collection ordinance will go into effect Jan. 2, 1975. Citywide residential trash collection will begin that day. Areas shown on the map with vertical lines have collection on Wednesday and Saturday; horizontal lines, Tuesday and Friday; no lines Monday and Thursday. The ordinance which bans burning and requires trash collection, does not cover the collection of trash from businesses. Businesses will have to arrange collection on their own.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS

Folks aren't ever so bad or good as their opinions.

Impatience is an American fault — we try to do things too fast, too easily. Increasing the minimum wage (by law) decreases the number of jobs (by economics).

Every wage is a trade — my production for your wage dollars. If I cannot produce enough goods in one hour for you to sell for more than $2.00 (January 1, to be $2.10) you simply can not hire me. No law can force you to, because you would soon be out of business, providing no jobs.

But there is a way to do it (and we all want it done). Train me to produce enough to be worth $2.00, and provide me with modern machines that make it possible for me to produce that much.

It may take time, but — let's be honest — it is the only way it can be done.

Warner & Swasey

Imagine yourself a young girl, lonely and frightened. You have no furniture, no refrigerator or stove, and little money. But you do have a baby and it's Christmas!

Christmas is a time when eyes and ears are turned outside, away from their usual introspective concern toward a compassionate, understanding care for others. Christmas is a time when many persons do more for others, and add an extra special touch to their family relationships.

This young girl was no different, she wanted her baby to have a Christmas as any young child should have. But with so little, where could she turn? Who could possibly help, who would possibly care? The Salavation Army cared.

The Salvation Army cares throughout the year, but especially at Christmas special programs are set up in every community by either the Army's Corps-Community Center or the Salvation Army's Service Unit Committee. Dinners are brought to shut-ins, gift baskets wrapped for the lesser fortunate, and Christmas cheer spread throughout the community.

The joy inspired in those who receive the Army's help reflects the importance of that aid. Joy and hope are hard to express, but this young mother described her hope precisely; "There are only two days of my life, of which i've been touched so deeply. The day my baby was born, and today. Just knowing there are people in this world who really care, makes me sure I'm going to make it."

The relief that her baby would have at least one present Christmas morning overwhelmed this young mother. She wrote: "I'd like to thank you from the bottom of my heart for thinking of me and my baby on Christmas. I understanding now that its not presents that make Christmas. It's people. People like you, who are so loving, so giving, and so concerned."

Sharing IS caring! Your gift to The Salvation Army's Christmas program can help many people just like this young mother. Not only will you brighten their Christmas, but you may also brighten their days throughout the year by your generosity. Mail your check today or drop your gift in a Salvation Army street-corner kettle.

GET OUR BICENTENNIAL GOING

Now that elections are over, it is high time to get another of our many neglected projects back in action, specifically, our nation's Bicentennial celebration.

For a large number of reasons, Federal leadership in the Bicentennial planning has been sadly lacking. Some of the anti-Bicentennial attitude was clearly political; it was feared by some of Nixon's enemies that he might be favored by some of the Bicentennial glory in 1974. Had it not been for Watergate, this would have been near the end of what otherwise might have been a triumphant ending of two terms in office.

Other obstacles came from within the national commission itself, in the form of an "anti-capitalist mentality" which feared that private business might somehow reap financial profits from the birthday event. In the left-of-center circles in Washington, "profit" is a dirty word. So, plans to include business firms were thrown out.

It is also clear that certain anti-patriotic, pro-left influences have been present in the Federal commission. When a Bicentennial headquarters was opened in our Nation's Capital, it was decorated with a mural which depicted Karl Marx, Comrade Mao and others of extreme radical vintage as heroes, while the President of the United States was caricatured as a gangster.

It is time to get such nonsense and foolishness behind us, and get down to work on meaningful programs to celebrate the birth of the United States of America. Congress has appropriated the funds to do the job. A great many important dates in our history leading up to the American Revolution have already missed receiving their Bicentennial recognition because of the inactivity of the Commission

President Ford, himself, should now demand that the Commission produce results. Failing that, he should fire the lot of them and appoint a new Commission which will do so.

I truly believe that someday we will see an America that knows no north or south, no east nor west - an American undivided by creed or color, untorn by suspension or strike.

CHRISTMAS IS ...

Christmas is the only time in your whole life you dared roller skate in the living room and actually got away with it. It is stuffed turkey and grandparents and one more pair of socks for Uncle Frank.

Christmas is the crackle and spit of a new birch log. It's poker-faced threats of sticks and charcoal and empty boxes, and it's not being scared in the least.

Christmas is gobbling down cookies as fast as Mother sugars them. It's plaster-of-paris shepherds, and Dad stringing the treelights on all wrong. And it's tinsel in your hair.

It's candles and shaking hands and a red velvet dress and wine "just this once." It's smiling at the lady on the bus you don't e ven know, and it's her smiling back.

Christmas is revolving doors and Salvation Army Santas and going shopping all on your own. It's smuggled-in presents and lopsided bows.

It's being tingly cold all over and then it's steamy hot cocoa.

Christmas is bells ringing and snow crunching and children singing. It's a kaleidoscope of color and sound, a time to be sentimental and glad of it.

Christmas is men at peace with themselves. And it goes by so quickly.

GOING "TO THE CITY"?

Just for the heck of it, see how many times this coming week you hear this comment:

"Well, think we may drive up to the city to do some Christmas shopping this week."

Bet you hear it more than once ... and chances are, it's a feminine comment.

Those ladies just aren't thinking.

Most of them, we suspect, run their households on money that comes from business establishments based right here in Clinton, business establishments which, in turn, make their money from people who buy things right here in Clinton.

If everybody "went to the city" to do their shopping, it wouldn't be long until a lot of the money constantly changing hands here stopped making its rounds. This would be a serious situation and one which would affect quite a few jobs. (Ever stop to count how many folks get paychecks and support families from jobs in local stores) We certainly don't want to be any prophet of gloom or doom, but it's no secret that the money situation in the United States has seen better days.

Please -- ladies -- (and any men, too, who might be inclined "to go to the city" -- tho we doubt there are many) -- please try to buy everything possible right here at home in the Golden Valley this year.

Our stores are well-stocked. Our prices are competitive. Buy at home and help keep our local businesses thriving -- and hiring local folks to work in them.

A friend told us the other day he followed this motto: "If you can't buy it in Clinton, you don't need it."

Well, we realize this isn't exactly so ... there are a few things you can't buy in Clinton ... but darn few that are essential, we'll bet.

If you want to "go to the city" and hear the Christmas music (heaven forbid) or see the lights, head right out.

But please ... as much as possible ... try to support your home town, where you live and work, too. It's more important than ever this year. Think it through.

YOU CAN TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS

It may be true, as the Pennsylvania Dutch saying has it, that "we get too soon old and too late smart." But it is not true that getting older necessarily means losing whatever smarts you have.

The commonly held belief that we hit a mental peak at about age 17 and then go downhill for the rest of our lives is a myth, says Dr. Lissy F. Jarvik, a professor of psychiatry at the University of California in Los Angeles.

Citing several studies, including her own, of intellectual functioning among aging populations, she maintains that generally there is no decline in knowledge or reasoning ability, not only into the 30s and 40s, but into the 60s and 70s as well.

One continuing study has been following children who are now adults in their 40s. No decline in intellectual functioning has been observed. Another study has followed college students who were first tested at the time of World War II. These people are now in their 50s, and no decline has been found.

The most common complaint of older people is that their memory is not as good as it used to be. But when learning takes place under laboratory conditions, there is equally proficient learning between young and old people and memory is also often equal.

Much of what we call loss of memory, says Dr. Jarvik, may be due to inadequate learning in the first place, possibly caused by such factors as hearing difficulty, impaired vision, inattention or trying to learn too fast.

In addition, she says, mental deterioration among older people is often a symptom of depression. Mental alertness can often be restored simply by supplying counseling, psychotherapy or antidepressant medicine.

There is also a stereotyped idea about older people and loss of memory, says Dr. Jarvik, and old people are as guilty of it as young ones.

For instance, when an older person puts something some where and can't find it later, we say it is "because of age."

Ah, but when a young person does the same thing, some other excuse is offered and the failure of memory is ignored.

THE MARKUP OF THE SERVICE ECONOMY

The much higher prices that motorists are paying for antifreeze this fall indicates a major problem of our affluent economy -- one that has to be solved before we enter any new era.

In this connection, let us use the shortage of ethylene glycol, the major chemical component in antifreeze, as a test case. Supplies have not kept up with demand, so that the average price of antifreeze per gallon has risen from last year's $1.90 to $5.50. Also, some retailers have been charging as high as $12.50 per gallon, according to some press reports.

In fact, much as the toilet paper incident earlier this year, antifreeze brokers are holding supplies out of normal distribution channels and offering them at inflated prices to the highest bidder. Most retailing firms have declined these high secretive offers.

Union Carbide, whose Prestone is the largest selling brand, has stopped releasing wholesale prices to the press because the ultimate buyer gets mad. A Union Carbide spokesman goes so far as to say that a "fair" retail price is between $5 and $6.50 a gallon "based on our price structure and the normal pricing employed in the auto trades for other products."

According to Dow Chemical, which produces Dowguard antifreeze, the price for wholesale lots is $2.52 a gallon, which indicates a fair retail price would be at least 100 per cent markup over the wholesale price.

What protection do consumers have against a service-inflated economy? Well, one thing they can do is substitute unknown brands from premium- priced labels, as long as the substitute, in this case, is made from ethylene glycol. It's the chemical composition that is important and not the label.

Other options include straining the dirty antifreeze and temporarily replacing it in the cooling system after the cooling system is flushed clean. However, most of us are subject to the marketing of the past years, and some of us are uncertain about substitutes or do-it-yourself programs. A consequence of increasing costs to the consumer is that we will have more awareness of products and an increase in do-it-yourself projects.

The joint national effort of the Executive Branch and the private sector to identify and eliminate rules and regulations that increase costs will not only dampen inflation but bring back value to the marketplace. The costly special privileges of industry, labor and agriculture only make us all pay more at the end of the receiving line. Yes, we have the world's number-one service economy (more than half of GNP is comprised of service items), but the service area is getting out of hand and whenever this is a shortage or even the threat of one there are more people willing to make an extra buck in the chain of command than there are people interested in getting the product to the final user at a reasonable price.

What this all adds up to is that people everywhere are getting fed up with higher prices and are balking on buying.

A vacationer reports that while having a bit of lunch at a roadside restaurant a well-dressed gent came in and ordered a cup of coffee. The waitress served it in a thick, heavy cup.

"Where is the saucer?" asked the gent.

"We don't use no saucers here," said the waitress. "The trade we serve drink coffee out of cups."

The horse would have a good laugh today if he could see motorists adjusting their shoulder harnesses.

Passing a door in the wee hours of the morning, a drunk noticed a sign which read "Ring the bell for the janitor". He did just that, and a sleepy-eyed man came to the door.

"What do you want?" asked the man.

"No, Horace Dodge," the driver corrected.

"No, Edsel Ford."

After a short silence, one passenger nudged the lady and said' "Go ahead, you can't be wrong all the time."

Two small boys, aged 7 and 2, were waiting in line at an ice cream stand. The little brother was announcing loudly: "I want vanilla. I want vanilla."

The supply of vanilla had given out. Interested parents stood by to see how the 7-year-old would handle such a crisis. Without flinching, he ordered 2 strawberry cones and handed one to his little brother. "Here you are," he said briskly. "Pink vanilla."

SALT TALKS AGAIN

President Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev have worked out "agreements" in their sessions in Vladivostok regarding restrictions on the use of nuclear arms. This is a continuation of the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks and presumably would extend a prohibition of certain nuclear weapons for another 10 years.

The Vladivostok talks do have a positive side. They show that the two great nuclear powers can sit together in discussion of nuclear weaponry and seek means of control. There is a deficit side, however. Russia's good faith in the keeping of agreements has always been questionable, and so far as is known now there is no arrangement for on-site inspection of nuclear stockpiles, either by the contracting powers or neutrals. The critical issue thus boils down to mutual trust.

Whatever final arrangements are worked out on limiting weapons, the United States can't stand idle in its military preparations. Our navel capacity must be expanded to match or surpass that of the Russians. Our ties with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization must be strengthened and our strength in the Far East and Middle East enhanced. Military preparation for defense should have priority in these periolous times. HLH

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: The Kim Kidnaping Case

SEOUL — South Korea's President Chung Hee Park has been bedeviled by a bizarre kidnaping case, which almost brought a break in diplomatic relations with Japan and badly damaged his international standing.

On Aug. 8, 1973, his last presidential opponent, Kim Dae Jung, was abducted in broad daylight from Tokyo's Grand Palace Hotel. He turned up a few days later in Seoul under house arrest.

I have carefully delved into the incident, which has been shrouded in mystery.

Shortly before the kidnaping, Kim Dae Jung called on me in Washington to complain about President Park. I found Kim again this week in a snug home in the maze of byways that make up Seoul.

He looked much the same, an unlikely figure of international intrigue, with a sad, cherubic face. On the wall behind the stove was a picture of himself standing in triumph for a huge presidential rally. He lost the 1971 election to President Park by 900,000 votes.

Speaking with quiet resolve, Kim told me how six burly Koreans had grabbed him in the hotel corridor, thrust him into a room and held an ether-soaked cloth over his nose.

The drug wore off as he was hustled down the elevator. Two Japanese boarded the elevator on the seventh floor. Kim cried out: "Help me! They are going to kill me!"

The two Japanese passengers hastily departed the elevator on the third floor and the kidnapers angrily beat Kim as they continued the ride down to the garage. They pushed him into a car, jammed his head down on the seat and held hands over his eyes and mouth.

They tried several times to anesthetize him, but the ether always wore off quickly. He estimated that the drive lasted five hours.

Kim was taken first to an apartment where he was bound and gagged, then to the waterfront where he was dumped into a small launch. To the best of his belief, this occurred somewhere near Osaka.

His arms were freed and he prayerfully made the sign of the cross, thinking his abductors intended to throw him into the sea. Instead they beat him badly and hauled him aboard a larger ship.

Far out to sea, he was lashed to a wooden board and weighted down with huge stones. He knew for certain he was about to be cast overboard to the bottom of the sea.

"I prayed," Kim told me emotionally. "I asked Jesus Christ to save me. As I prayed, I heard strong noises like bumping, A crew member cried out, 'Airplane!' Then it was reported an American helicopter had appeared."

Kim was dragged out of sight, where he remained tied to the two rocks. Several hours later, a crew member whispered in his ear: "Don't worry. You will be saved."

Not long afterward, his bonds were loosened and he was given a drink. On August 11, he arrived at some port. He judged from the heavy truck noises that it was an industrial port.

Thereafter, he received kind treatment. A doctor attended him twice as he was moved overland to a small farmhouse, then to a Western-style apartment. He knew he was back in Korea.

Eventually, his abductors left him on a side street, tapes over his eyes, with instructions not to remove the blindfold until they had time to leave the scene. As they drove off, he pulled off the tapes and found himself in front of the church in his home neighborhood.

Kim raised a howl about the kidnaping and was immediately placed under house arrest. He was investigated for several weeks for alleged treasonous activity abroad. The charges were abandoned on Oct. 8, 1973, and he was released from house arrest.

The courts asked that he be detained in the country, however, until earlier charges of election irregularities are resolved. Kim admitted that he was now free to attend church, to participate in political activity and to go where he wished within the country.

But he complained that he was under constant surveillance by the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. He also charged that KCIA agents intimidated Korean politicians and newsmen who tried to call on him.

Kim believes his abductors were also KCIA agents, although they identified themselves as members of a patriotic youth party. The American and Japanese press have suggested strongly that President Park himself ordered the abduction of his rival.

I spoke at length to the South Korean leader about the case. Park is a stoic man, with a face that betrays no emotion. But he responded to my question with an uncharacteristic burst of emotion. Heretofore, he had refused to be dragged into the controversy, he said, and, therefore, had not responded to questions about the Kim Dae Jung kidnaping. But he told me earnestly: "I swear to God that I had nothing to do with this ugly affair."

Sources close to President Park agree that the incident would be out of character for him. They say that Park, himself a target for political assassination, has strong feelings against political violence.

I questioned witnesses both in and out of the South Korean government about the kidnaping. I spoke to the KCIA chief, Shin Chick Soo. I also talked to opposition leaders who preferred not to be named.

The kidnapers have never been identified, but almost certainly they were KCIA men. But it also appears that a hard-line KCIA faction acted on its own, without orders from above.

I told President Park of my conclusions. He agreed that the abduction was probably the work of the KCIA. In fact, he said that he had held the KCIA chief responsible for the incident and had summarily fired him. But his successor, Shin Chick Soo, has been unable to locate the kidnap culprits.

Godfather's Christmas Gift: Con Carlo, Boss of All Bosses 'Retiring' leaving young Mafiosi hunting political connections

NEW YORK — This is the season to be wary of the Godfathers. Hollywood believes that Mafia cinema horrors are Christmas fare. Ghoulish thought.

The real Godfather, according to most authorities is 72-year- old boss of all bosses, Don Carlo Gambino, the quiet man of Massapequa, Long Island. The word is, he's retiring from the chairmanship of the board. He has a house in Florida. He is tired. He is eager to join and fraternize with some of the few old-timers he enjoys. Like the 72-year-old Meyer Lansky who survived the courts, the ancient Murder, Inc. days and bullets.

This is good news but not for the easy reasoning which springs to mind so swiftly. The mob won't disappear. But many of its old connections will.

What most Mafia-watchers and other buffs forget is that the old crowd of dons grew up with the men who made them possible -- the judges, the police commissioners, the mayors and even federal (U.S.) and county district attorneys.

The dons and the judges and the police commissioners and some mighty weighty public citizens would be each other's house guests; they would jolly alongside each other on banquet daises -- mobsters and police commissioners. They made judges. And they collected their I.O.U.s. Frankie Costello, the prime minister, did.

They even planted a high assistant in the office of the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York, once upon a grim time.

But most of those dons are dead, or deathly ill, or rotting in prison, or just rotting as is one of them as a human vegetable with a bullet in the head.

Look at the Godfathers' roster. Olive oil king, the late Joe Profaci, to whose wake came some world famous figures, and from whose "organization" sprang the so-called Columbo mob, is long dead. So is Tommy (Three Fingers Brown) Luchese, friend of mayors and police commissioners (and the fellow who planted, according to the federals, the man on the U.S. attorney's office here), dead.

And of course, the old boss of all bosses Vito Genovese is dead. And New England's alleged Mafia boss Ray Patriarca was sentenced to prison on a murder conspiracy. Philadelphia's underworld organized crime chief Angelo Bruno is very sick. Alleged "family" leader Joe Bonanno is in sunny exile in Arizona

So of the big five families, this leaves Don Carlo, now eager to do what all elderly men -- and "statesmen" do. Sit in the sun, reminisce, keep an eye on the business. But let the younger men run it.

However, many of the men to whom Gambino reportedly was ready to throw the flaming torch -- or am I being too subtle? -- are in prison. According to FBI Director Clarence Kelley's latest count July 1, there were 1,367 convicted syndicate mobsters including the top Mafia "functionaries" in New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland and New England.

Five Mafia high-ranking chieftains were among the nearly 2,700 mobsters awaiting prosecution on that date.

This is the story in many other cities and states -- Chicago, Detroit, you name them. In Chicago, for example, old timers from the Warner Bros. type movie days today are battling for syndicate control -- and their lives.

This is not only true for New York or Illinois. John Goldstein, the U.S. Attorney for New Jersey, the state once dubbed the most corrupt in the union, has told me and others that the mob is smashed in his state.

"What is left are fragmentized pieces of organized crime families and we are aware of who and where they are. And, we want to keep it that way," said Goldstein.

At another time he said: "The leaders of every organized crime family in this State have been convicted ... and have been incarcerated. Organized crime has been deprived of its leadership and once vast organizations have been splintered into what are today relatively small groups of individuals which can be controlled and monitored by local authorities."

So Carlo Gambino, the don of dons, and whomever is left of his colleagues on what is called, in federal circles, a national commission, have had to dig deeper into the ranks. They have reached for younger men and thus men who have not grown up with the politicos and the jurists and high government officials who protected them.

Nor have they grown up with powerful labor leaders who would rather forget the old dons. Remember that Carlo Gambino ran a labor relations business and was one of the most powerful of all labor fixers.

So what is called the Mafia will have to operate quite differently under its new and younger breed. It won't be easy. It would get more violent as the enforcers instead of the corrupters move up front.

Bluff man bound over to Circuit on drug charge

BLOOMFIELD — Jimmy Midkiff of Poplar Bluff, charged with attempting to obtain a controlled drug by assuming the role of a doctor, was bound over to Circuit Court for trial, following a preliminary hearing held Thursday before Magistrate Judge Koss W. Blomeyer.

Noel Botsch, pharmacist at Overturf Drug Store in Dexter, testified that a man he believes to be Midkiff called the store on Nov. 14, saying he was Dr. A. L. Williams of St. Louis and ordered a prescription forthe controlled drug Didrex. The caller stated that the drug was for a Mrs.Ralph Gaylord. Botsch said when he tried to contact the alleged Dr. Williams, he found there was no such doctor at the address given, nor could he locate his telephone number. He further testified that later in the day he received a call from a man asking if the prescription had been filled. He saidhe believes the second call came from the same man who had called earlier pretending to be Dr. Williams.Botsch said he told the caller the prescription was ready for pick up and then contacted the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff Rlph Mouser testified the arrested Midkiff shortly before closing time when he arrived to pick up the drug. Mouser said Midkiff told him he was picking up the drug for a Ralph Gaylord of Poplar Bluff who was in Dexter getting a chain saw repaired. He said Midkiff then pointed out the automobile which the two men had driven to Dexter. Mouser said the automobile was watched throughout the night but no one returned to the car.

Midkiff was convicted of a similar charge in 1973, when he tried to forge another prescription at a Dexter drug store.

Albert W. McCulley was given a 30-day jail sentence after he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of impersonating a police officer.

An application for disqualification of judge was entered in the case against Leroy Adams, Charles Dewey Sissom and Truman Eugene Medley of Sikeston, who are charged with the felonious burning of a rural Essex house, owned by Carl and Sue Swinger.

The accident occurred when Watson lost control of his eastbound car, which ran off the road on a curve and struck a tree.

Both victims were taken to Doctors Hospital at Poplar Bluff.

Three Arkansas residents were injured in a two-vehicle accident at 3 p.m. on Route D three miles south of Cooter in Pemiscot County.

The accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Rosa Jamine Haile, 17, of Blytheville, Ark., ran a stop sign and struck an eastbound pickup truck driven by Allen Wayne Holt, 29, of Manila, Ark.

PERKINS — A purse containing nearly $600 in cash and checks was stolen from the rural home of Faye Schott between 6 and 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Scott County Deputy Sheriff Jack Stewart said today.

She was gone for about 30 minutes, Stewart said, and when she returned, the purse was missing.

2 sought in hold-up

ESSEX--Stoddard County authorities are searching for two Negro men in connection with the Thursday night armed robbery of Reed's Texaco Station at Essex.

The two men forced station owner Donald Reed and a customer, William McMullen, to lie on the floor and then robbed them of their wallets. Reed's wallet contained $17 and McMullen had $100. They also took $100 from the cash register.

Reed told authorities the men were armed with a small caliber revolver and were last seen headed east at approximately 7:30 p.m.

The men were believed to be driving a light colored automobile.

Kelly School about 12:30 p.m. Thursday after becoming disturbed about his sixth grade mathematics class and became the object of a search before showing up at his grandparents' home unharmed Thursday night, Scott County Deputy Sheriff Jack Stewart said today.

The sheriff's department was called to help search for the boy about 8 p.m., Stewart said.

However, he arrived at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kraft of Commerce, shortly after 9 p.m.

"He was safe, but wet and cold," Stewart said.

Wardell man burns to death

WARDELL—A Wardell man was burned to death Wednesday night in his home in a fire apparently caused when the wiring in his television short circuited and ignited.

Authorities said the man, Charlie Canner, 64, was a widower and was alone in his living room when the fire broke out about 8:30 p.m. The fire was confined to that room.

Firemen were called to the Canner home, located in a small development about one mile north of Wardell on Highway B. They summoned an ambulance, but a witness at the scene said Canner was so badly burned that he was probably dead when firemen pulled him from the house.

Canner was taken to Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti, where he was pronounced dead on arrival at 9:15 p.m.

Camouflage is used in warfare to disguise objects so that they blend into their surroundings. Scientific camouflage was developed during World War I and the French made elaborate devices to conceal military objectives and industrial plants. During World War II, camouflage was used on land and sea but became less effective with the development of radar and aerial photography, The World Almanac notes.

Ann Landers

Waitress dislikes after-dinnersitters

Dear Ann Landers: I have a message for the public and can think of no better way to get it across than to write to Ann Landers. Be an angel and print it.

I supervise a large number of waitresses. Most of them have families and need to go home after work, but they can't leave until YOU do. So...

I am talking to the after-dinner sitters. The businessmen who occupy a table from 6:30 or 7:00 until 11:00 at night. They have five cups of coffee after the meal -- briefcases open and papers strewn everywhere. Don't they have offices?

Then there are the hand-holding smoochers who sit at a table and gaze into each other's eyes for two hours after the food is gone. Don't they have homes?

Please, Ann, the waitresses can't leave until the place is cleared out. Will you do us a favor and say something? -- Tempus Fugit

Dear Temp: Say what? "Dear Restaurant Diners: Please eat and get the heck out of the place because the help wants to go home"?

Sorry, but when people spend money to dine out they have the right to sit and talk, provided other patrons aren't waiting to be seated. After-dinner visiting, be it business or social, is part of the reason people eat in restaurants instead of at home. I'm not about to help you give them the bum's rush.

Dear Ann Landers: Your column with its enormous circulation was largely responsible for starting an intensive effort to eliminate cancer. About a year ago I wrote to you in hope that you would get behind another extremely cruel disease. Aging. You didn't print my letter because you probably thought I was some kind of a nut. I do hope you'll print this one.

We've all seen great writers, statesmen and scientists (as well as friends and relatives) decay in mind and body. The tragic waste and misery caused by aging need no longer continue. Like other diseases that have plagued mankind for centuries, aging can be brought under control, but only when we stop accepting it as "inevitable." Much has been learned in recent years about the biological nature of aging, but no effective attack has been launched because there's been no massive effort.

Please, Ann, get behind this campaign. Aging could join the list of such diseases as bubonic plague, TB, smallpox and polio. -- H. J. of Chicago.

Dear H.J.: There is no doubt that the life span of humans can and will be lengthened. In fact, it's been happening right along. But don't expect some new magic elixir to be developed that will keep people youthful, ad infinitum.

The real "elixirs" are based on (a) what we inherit from our ancestors and (b) how we t ake care of ourselves. We see people all around us eating, drinking and smoking themselves to death. There's no way to keep these people alive, much less youthful.

Dear Ann: I have a two-part bet with a friend. If I win one part he pays me $10. If I win both he pays me $25. He seems so sure of himself, I'm uneasy. The questions are these: (1) Can a fish drown? (2) Is a giraffe mute? I say yes to the first and no to the second. How about it? -- Needles and Pins

Dear N. and P.: You win $25! And if you don't know what to do with the money, give it to your local chapter of The American Cancer Society. The need is great.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism -- Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 35 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120. Copyright 1974 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Roth Puts Novelist Into Spider's Web

MY LIFE AS A MAN. By Philip Roth. Holt, Rinehart & Winston. 330 Pages. $8.95.

Still in his 20s, a successful career as a fiction writer opening before him, life and the future look good to Peter Tarnopol. It is not to be.

Why it isn't is the subject of Philip Roth's eighth novel, an acidulous yet often marvelously comic study of a monomaniac novelist obsessed with his frantic efforts to achieve manhood and his constant failure to do so. The novelist, Tarnopol, who tellingly refers to a character in one of "his" two short stories that appear in this book as "sometimes I think that underneath all that 'maturity' you're just a crazy little boy," has his quest for manhood blown to pieces. That happens when he meets and marries — disastrously — Maureen, a virago to end all viragos.

The marriage, into which Maureen, a calculating survivor from the streets, maneuvers Tarnopol with some transparent to all but him tricks, is a living hell for both of them. As he tells in a long autobiographical narrative — which with the two stories make up the substance of this powerfully written novel — Tarnopol manages to complete a prize-winning novel but after that it's all downhill. Even after he manages to separate from the talent-envying, man-eating Maureen, Tarnopol finds that physical separation does not mean mental separation.

He finds that he has become a person who "keeps mostly to himself, devoting nights as well as days to considering what has become of his life. He is confused and incredulous much of the time, and on the subject of the late Mrs. Tarnopol, he continues to be a man possessed." So possessed, in fact, that he is unable to write anything but "pounds and pounds of pages that. . .had the marriage itself as the subject and constituted the major part of the daily effort to understand how I had fallen into this trap and why I couldn't get out."

Trapped in a spider web of his own making, Tarnopol struggles and struggles again to free himself and the reader can only be fascinated by this obsessive tale that Roth has written so well.

FLY TO VIRGINIA

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Nearly 800 flights each day either arrive or depart from Virginia's two big airports, Washington National in Arlington and Dulles International in Fairfax. Twelve scheduled airlines, not counting several commuter carriers, serve National and 16 serve Dulles, according to the Virginia Division of Industrial Development.

Potato storage suggestions

JEFFERSON CITY--This column is a service from cooperative extension nutritionists at Lincoln University and the University of Missouri. Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Nutrition Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Q. How should potatoes be stored? I understand that they should not be refrigerated , and they turn soft and spoil for me at room temperature.

A. From Dr. Victor N. Lambeth, professor of horticulture at University of Missouri-Columbia: Irish or white potatoes should not be stored in the refrigerator since they are likely to become soggy and develop a sweet taste, is because the starch tends to change to sugar at temperatures below 40. The process can be reversed, the sugar changing back into starch, if the potatoes are returned to room temperature for about 10 days.

For best results potatoes should be stored in a dark, cool, moist place. The old-fashioned root cellars were ideal, but they are uncommon today. Modern basements tend to be to warm and dry. A corner of a garage may be satisfactory if proper precautions are taken. A strong woooden or cardboard box with a good lid can be used, and will need to be covered with burlap bags or other materials to insulate against freezing.

If a garden plot is available, the potatoes can be piled directly on the ground. They should be insulated with straw and then completely covered with 6-8" of soil. A suitable lid will make it more convenient to remove potatoes as needed.

Q. Are plastic containers safe for storing frozen foods? I have been told that the plastic may get into the food, making it unfit to eat.

A. From Professor Harold Bassett, state food and nutrition extension specialist at University of Missouri-Columbia: Plastic containers sold for the purpose of storing frozen foods can be used with complete confidence that they will not cause contamination. In fact, we have no evidence today of plastic dissolving into frozen foods.

Consumers should feel assured that the Food and Drug Administration is doing a good job of monitoring this situation. It is also comforting to know that a great deal of research is now under way to provide information about the safety of all sorts of materials which may come in contact with food.

Menominee Indians once controlled some 9,500,000 acres of Wisconsin, National Geographic says. Their holdings were reduced to 275,000 acres in a treaty between the tribe and the United States in 1854. Today, the Menominees' reservation covers about 230,000 acres.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You all know what toddlers are. They're the little people about two feet tall who walk under coffee tables and are the only ones in the house who can take the caps off the child-safe aspirin bottles.

Specifically, the letter writer was having difficulty advising his toddler in the following areas.

1. There are basic differences between food and clothing. You eat food and wear clothing. Food goes in; clothing goes on.

2. Do not bite anything that will bite back. This includes the dog, other babies, electrical cords, and your father when he is watching professional football on television.

3. Washing your face after a meal is not considered cruel and unusual punishment. It won't do any good to report Mommy and Daddy to the police.

4. Your pacifier is not a permanent part of your face. Removing it is not considered major surgery and does not normally require anesthetic.

5. Don't hide your tennis shoes in the oven when Mommy is making supper. It makes the roast taste funny.

6. Don't use the drapes in the living room to wipe your hands and face unless they are patterned.

7. Diaper rash does not have to be terminal.

I sympathize with the father from Illinois, but I don't know what to tell him. All my kids were born on a Monday and you know how sloppy the production is on a day following the weekend.

I never met three children who could understand me less. When I laid out the pajamas, put the sides up on the crib, and turned on the nite light, they came alive like the "big midnight show", standing on their heads, bringing out all the toys, and playing patty cake with the dog.

When I picked up the phone, like mechanical robots on schedule, they gargled bleach, rolled potatoes across the floor, and climbed on top of the TV set and took off all their clothes.

When I said, "No," they giggled ... "not now", they bit me ... "Come to Mama", they ran into the traffic, "Let me see what is in your hand", they ate it ... and "The strained lamb is good for you", they blew it back in my face.

Ozarks naturalist slated for seminar

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A noted Ozarks naturalist and newspaper columnist, Leonard Hall, who for the past 30 years has been Missouri's most widely read writer on conservation, natural history, wildlife and country life, will be the featured speaker at a banquet highlighting the Southeast Missouri Foundation for Medical Care Inc.'s first semiannual seminar for continuing medical education.

Approximately 50 physicians from a 20-county area served by the foundation are expected to attend the two-day seminar, which will begin at 1 p.m. Saturday at Howard Johnson's Motor Inn.

The seminar, for which attending physicians will receive eight hours of elective credit, is designed to bring doctors up to date on medical topics and types of treatment and provide a program of continuing education.

Hall, a native Missourian who has resided at Possum Trot Farms in the Ozarks since 1946, will speak at the seminar banquet at 7:30 Saturday night.

His column appears in the St. Louis Globe- Democrat, and he has written for magazines ranging from Life and Colliers to Successful Farming and The Land. His four books are "Possum Trot Farm", "Country Year", "Stars Upstream" and "Ozark Wildflowers". He has also produced five color films and lectured for the National Audubon Society and independently in 40 states, Canada and the Caribbean.

Recipient of many state and national awards for writing and conservation, Hall was appointed in 1955 by Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall and served until 1959 as first chairman of the Ozark National Scenic Riverways Advisory Commission because of "his efforts in creating America's first national river."

He holds honorary doctor of law degrees from Westminster College in Fulton and Washington University in St. Louis.

He is a trustee of the National Parks and Conservation Association; a director of the U. S. Humane Society, Defenders of Wildlife, Missouri Nature Conservancy, Missouri Citizens for Conservation, Missouri Audubon Society and Missouri Animal Protective Association; and is a member of other conservation and journalistic organizations.

Miniature orange tree bears fruit

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Deal, 819 Ruth St., are enjoying fresh oranges from a miniature orange tree. The tree is three years old, stands about one foot tall and is producing fruit for the first time. The tree currently has 10 oranges on it which are almost ripe. Two other oranges fell off as they ripened. Although the fruit is only a little larger than golf ball size, Mrs. Deal reports that it tastes just as sweet and good as regular size oranges. The tree, which has become a conversation piece at the Deal house, bloomed in April or May. Mrs. Deal reports that she had no confidence in it growing when she first got it as a gift, but now is very proud of it. (Daily Standard photo)

2 Prairie men bound to Circuit

CHARLESTON---Two East Prairie men, Lindy Williams and Richard Wilson, were bound over to Circuit Court Thursday morning following a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Judge T.J. Brown Jr. on burglary charges.

Witnesses called by the state were Richard Clinton Hutcheson, Bob Bird and Deputy Sheriff Robert Smith. Albert Kent was called to testify for the defense.

According to Hutcheson, he observed the two men putting tools and a television set in a car parked in the driveway of Bob Bird's home near Birds Point about 2 p.m. Oct. 16. Hutcheson said he had passed the Bird home a short time before and noticed the back door standing open and the tools and television set placed in shrubbery near the side of the house.

He said he then went to Albert Kent's home, got a shotgun and told Kent to call the sheriff's office.

After returning to the Bird home, he saw the men loading the items and blocked the driveway with his truck. He said he held the gun on the two men and made them lie down in a road ditch until Deputy Smith arrived.

Williams, who is free on $1,000 bond, and Wilson, who is free on $4,000 bond, are scheduled to appear in Circuit Court December 10.

Mrs. Hattie Lee Garrison of the Pinhook Community was bound over for a Dec. 10 appearance in Circuit Court following a preliminary hearing on a charge of exhibiting a dangerous and deadly weapon in a rude, angry and threatening manner. Mrs. Garrison was released on her own recognizance.

A preliminary hearing for Gerald Thomas on a charge of felonious assault was reset for Dec. 26, and he remained free on $1,000 bond. Thomas is accused of shooting at Mary Thomas with a .25-caliber pistol on Oct. 25.

An extradition hearing for Richard Michael Green, who was arrested Dec. 4 in Mississippi County on a Tennessee warrant charging him with strong-armed robbery, was scheduled on Dec. 12.

Preliminary hearing for Eddie Lee Butler and Walter Burnett of Charleston on charges of striking police officers while in performance of their duties, was set for Dec. 12. The two remained in custody under bond of $2,500 each. Chester Edward Gary of Charleston is free on $2,500 bond on the same charge, and his case was continued to Dec. 12 to allow him time to employ an attorney.

Thurman Guyton, Will Davis and Robert Foster pleaded guilty to stealing less than $50 and received 30-day suspended jail sentences. The men pleaded guilty to stealing a shaft, angle iron and bolts belonging to Hunter Raffety of Wyatt on Nov. 27. They were placed on probation for one year on condition they pay $14.33 each in court costs, obey the law and pay a total of $100 to Faffety.

Trial was set on Jan. 2, 1975 in cases charging Thomas Timothy Flood, Steven Michael Janke and Dan Michael Baumann with possession and being under the influence of a controlled substance (33.9 grams of marijuana).

John Essary and Gilbert Rundles pleaded not guilty to a trespassing charge, and trial was set for Jan. 2. Accused of trespassing on property owned by Edmond Burke on Nov. 23, the men were released on their own recognizance.

Trial of Jimmy Quinn of Charleston, who entered a not guilty plea to a charge of driving without an operator's license, was scheduled on Dec. 19.

Billy Wayne Coleman of Charleston was fined $165 and costs and given a 30-day suspended jail sentence on charges of driving while intoxicated and having no operator's license. He was placed on one-year probation.

Joyce Jewell Armour of Wyatt was fined $41 on charges of careless and imprudent driving and driving without a Missouri operator's license. A five day jail sentence will be suspended upon payment of fine and costs.

Other traffic fines included: Bruce Edward Penrod of East Prairie, careless and imprudent driving, $31; Melton Ray Moreton of East Prairie, careless and imprudent driving, $26; James Martin Norville of Anniston, expired vehicle license, $21; Martha Lou Smith of East Prairie, speeding, $28; and Willie Slaughter Jr. of Charleston, speeding, $33.

Jim Williford paid a $41 fine for violating the wildlife code. Danny Joe Groves and Mike Medlock were fined $35 each on the same charge. Five-day jail sentences for Groves and Medlock will be suspended upon payment of fines. Mark Patrick was levied a $38.75 fine for disturbing the peace.

Cases continued to Dec. 12 included: Charles Bratchus of Anniston, public intoxication; Billy Joe Hill of Sikeston and James Raymond Winchester of East Prairie, speeding; Kenneth Ray White of Morehouse, careless and imprudent driving; Lawrence A. Smith, nonsupport; Kathy Laverne Reynolds of Bertrand, passing in an intersection; and Sherry Reginia Mannon of Charleston, failure to transfer license.

A charge of assault with intent to kill against Flint Menard Pritchett of Matthews was continued to Dec. 19. Pritchett is accused of shooting his brother-in-law, Donald Lee Hubbard of East Prairie, on Nov. 27. He remained free on $5,000 bond.

RISE IN TOY SALES IS PREDICTED

NEW YORK (AP) -- Sales of model electric trains and accessories should reach a new high of $230 million at retail in 1974, and the volume of home racing sets and accessories is expected to hit $120 million.

This forecast was made here during the annual American Toy Fair by Richard E. Grey, president of a toy company.

Grey said 1974 retail volume will represent almost a 50 per cent increase over the estimated $160 million for model trains in 1973, and a 35 per cent rise over the $90 million in 1973 for racing equipment.

Who are today's influential Christians?

By David Poling

Recently, the editors of several major religious magazines sat down and decided on a list of the leading churchmen who would be known or have been read by Christians around the world. The editors make up the group which is called Interchurch Features and represents the bulk of main-line denominational publishing. They were aiming at the key group of religious leaders who were shaping the thought and action of millions of Christians, now and in the future.

People who have seen the list were somewhat puzzled. The names presented were worthy and respected enough — the only catch was nobody beyond the editorial circle seemed to know them! To prove an embarrassing point, Martin E. Marty, church historian and columnist/editor for the "Christian Century" asked his readers to correctly identify the names selected. Remember now, that Marty writes for a journal that enjoys above-average readership in church groups, is widely circulated in libraries, and is followed carefully by professional theologians. Here is his survey:

Billy Graham	67 %	Andrew Greeley	3
Hans Kueng	5	Vine Deloria	3
James Gustafson	4	Abel Muzorewa	3
Juergen Moltmann	4	Helder Camara	2
Rosemary Reuther	4	Bernard Lonergan	2
David DuPlessis	3

It surely is no surprise that Billy Graham swept the field. (And we shall devote a follow-up column to the continued success and influence of the Man from Montreat.) What startles the reader, and must be a little dismaying to the editors and the other selections, is that they are nearly unknown, alas, almost invisible beyond the tiniest of minorities. As Marty says, it's not their fault, they didn't ASK to be chosen for this honorable confusion!

Some explanations are in order, for good people need not and ought not be put down by this low celebrity rating. The Rev. Hans Kueng was one of the young, brilliant theologians to emerge from Vatican II, to have significant influence on Pope John XXIII, and to remain in the forefront of much ecumenical thought and practice. To be interested in the Church tomorrow, is to read his books today.

Dr. James Gustafson represents the strong and historic tradition of Yale in the field of Christian ethics — the long and lasting line that was so well served by H. Richard Niebuhr and Liston Pope.

Juergen Moltmann brought out his Theology of Hope to an eager and ready audience, developing a large following at Princeton. Completing the Ivy League influence is Rosemary Reuther at Harvard. She is the source of some fresh thinking in Liberation Theology. Other names mentioned are mostly related to the Third World and, obviously, not as well known in the United States and Canada. Vine Deloria, American Indian scholar and advocate, may be better known in sociology than religion.

Any list leaves people out, individuals that not only count, but have clout. Muscle. Large and extensive audiences. The most glaring absence is that of Keith Miller. Miller writes for millions of people, and to ignore him is to forget a vast evangelical-main-line readership that makes every title a best-seller. His new book and cassette, "The Edge of Adventure" hardly stays in stock. William Stringfellow, another layman of power and persuasion, should be in the list of top five, not 11. Father Henri Nouveen fills the lecture halls wherever he goes. His book, "The Wounded Healer" is a volume worth owning and quoting.

Scripture: Malachi 3:1-4; Matthew 3:1-12; John 1:6-8

PREPARING THE WAY

Individuals since the beginning of history have looked ahead to the future, assuring themselves that everything will then be better.

All true religions are future-orientated as we see in today's study of both the Old and the New Testaments. We always look for those leaders to take us into improved living conditions.

In all instances a messenger is involved, one who will prepare the people for the savior. Our brief reference to Malachi reminds us that a nation at its lowest ebb looks for some individual to pull it out of its difficulties.

Malachi means "my messenger." We are not sure who wrote this brief book in the middle of the 5th century, yet we feel he was associated with the Temple in some capacity.

The morale of the Jewish settlement was at a low ebb. The family life was upset by divorce and adultery. Too many persons had become cynical, corrupt, and godless.

The messenger's duty is to prepare the people for the day when the Savior will arrive. The Temple must be ready; acceptable offerings must be on hand.

Although there would be centuries before the arrival of Christ, the people retained their hopes.

Now we switch to the New Testament and study the role of John the Baptist as a messenger. He is the "voice of one crying in the Wilderness," alerting all persons who would listen to the forthcoming time for the Savior to arrive.

John attracted large crowds for his sermons. The Scripture today from Matthew no doubt represents a summary of his many talks heard by persons who came from many communities.

John baptized all who repented of their sin. He reminded them that they could not claim special favor based on their birth. They had to be reborn, cleansing their lives of past sins.

In many ways it is remarkable that so many sought out John, especially when he told them that "He who is coming after me is mightier than I, whose sandals I am not worthy to carry."

John baptized with water; Jesus was to baptize with the Holy Spirit and fire. John stressed the democratic move of his mission. All men and women were welcomed, regardless of their prior activities.

We live on the hope of merging our lives with a greater one. Social struggles continue about us. Nationalism continues to grow, especially in our difficulties over importing petroleum products.

The problems John encountered remain. The church in his day was not democratic. Unfortunately, some churches today are anything from being democratic. Barriers remain that tend to shut out strangers in some churches.

Today we need another John the Baptist to bring us back to God. Such messengers can become disturbers of our peace. Too much shallowness of our religion remains in our lives.

Recently the Rev. Billy Graham told a group of publishers that their newspapers needed to crusade for higher morals, thus serving as messengers calling for a rebirth of the people.

Dr. Graham considered Watergate as one example of the nation's integrity. In comparing our people with those 2000 years ago, he said "Man is the same since the Garden of Eden. His flaws show up every day on the pages of the newspapers. The Bible considers man a lawbreaker by nature."

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale reminds us that "The world needs millions of acts of forgiveness to flush out hate, resentment and bitterness."

John the Baptist had a great mission to perform. He was the No. 2 man of his day, serving as the advance representative of the One who came to save the world.

THE BIBLE

164. Dedication of the Temple

Solomon called a convocation at Jerusalem of all the leaders of Isarel to witness the transferring of the Ark of the Covenant from the tabernacle in Zion to Solomon's newly-constructed temple. There was nothing in the temple except the two stone tablets Moses had placed at Mount Horeb.

But when the priests returned from the inner sanctuary, a bright cloud filled the temple—it was so bright that the priests had to return outside because the glory of the Lord filled the entire building. King Solomon blessed the people and delivered the invocation.

And Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven: And he said, Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart; Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and has fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day. NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope has been honored with the New York Salvation Army Association's 1974 citation of merit for the "wonder and joy of his good humor that for more than five decades he has shared with others."

Past recipients of the award include Presidents Richard M. Nixon, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Herbert Hoover and Lyndon B. Johnson.

CHICAGO (AP) — Recording star Ravi Shankar is in fair condition after being admitted to a hospital suffering from exhaustion and chest pains. The sitar player from India came to Chicago on a concert tour with former Beatle George Harrison. Shankar, 54, entered the hospital Wednesday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has decided not to contest further an appellate court's reversal of a contempt conviction against Meyer Lansky, the one-time financial wizard of the underworld.

A Justice Department spokesman said Thursdy, "We feel it's not something we can take to the Supreme Court."

Lansky, 72, was convicted last year of failing to answer a subpoena issued by a federal grand jury in Miami and was sentenced to serve a year and a day in prison. He was freed on appeal bond and the conviction was reversed last June by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, which said the government failed to prove that Lansky willfully and contemptuously avoided compliance with the subpoena.

Executives see rise in rate of bankruptcy

Over nine in 10 (93.6 per cent) chief executives of 300 leading U. S. corporations expect a rise in the number of corporate bankruptcies over the next 18 months, according to an exclusive study published today by The Gallagher Presidents' Report. The weekly newsletter to company presidents finds that 89.9 per cent of the corporate heads agree the business community faces a cash crisis. The problem is heightened by the fact that nearly two-thirds (65.0 per cent) see the crisis continuing through 1975.

Presidents have shattered the tight money myth, The Report continues. Over three in five (64.2 per cent) of the GPR respondents think that high interest rates fail to curb the growth of inflation. Their thinking is borne out by the fact that nearly two- thirds (65.0 percent) were forced to tap the money markets this year while over seven in 10 (72.4 percent) see the 12 per cent prime as a deterrent to corporate borrowing. Less than half (48.7 per cent) have been forced to postpone expansion plans, The Report adds.

Three in five (59.3 per cent) chief executives favor the sale of corporate stock directly to the public, according to the study. The disappearance of competitive money markets (cited by 55.7 per cent of the presidents in the study) is viewed as a major reason for the current high interest rates. Nearly two in five (39.2 per cent) oppose efforts by banks to "market" corporate stocks (see banks as already too powerful). 60.2 per cent are against repeal of the Glass-Steagall Act as a way to stimulate investor interest in the securities markets. Over four in five (81.7 per cent) favor enactment of legislation this year to improve the equity markets. A sliding scale of capital gains tax is viewed as the best route, followed by a reduction of the tax on dividend income and a decrease in the capital gains tax from 25 per cent to 20 per cent, The Report concludes.

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Special recognition of all Eagle Scouts who live within the Southeast Missouri Council area of Boy Scouts of America is planned during the annual Eagle Scout Court of Honor to be held next Feb. 23 in Academic Hall on the Southeast Missouri State University campus.

Walter Hedrick of Sikeston, chairman of the council's advancement committee, is heading the effort to locate the names and addresses of all Eagles, regardless of whether they received the award in this council or in what year they received the award.

Stating that the Eagle award has been given by the national organization for 64 years, Hedrick remarked, "It is our idea to try to find out how many Eagles we have in the council and also to bring as many of them together as possible. We purposely aren't saying 'past' Eagle Scouts, because the Eagle award is for life."

Hedrick asks all Eagles or friends of Eagles to contact the Southeast Missouri Council Boy Scout Service Center in Cape Girardeau (Box 637), so as many names as possible can be placed on the invitation list.

"Even if the Eagle award holder cannot attend the Court of Honor, the council is interested in obtaining his name so a list can be printed in a program for the affair," Hedrick added.

The Court of Honor will be preceded by a dinner at a location to be announced. After the Court of Honor, a reception in honor of the current Eagle award winners will be hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Mark Scully. Dr. Scully is president of Southeast Missouri State University and has served for the past two years as president of the Southeast Missouri Boy Scout Council.

The Court of Honor is an annual affair held to honor all scouts in the 14-county Southeast Missouri Council who have attained the rank of Eagle during the preceding year. The number to be honored at the 1975 ceremony is not known at the present time.

A speaker and Eagle class sponsor will be announced in the near future.

The information needed by the council office on every Eagle in the area includes name, current address, year Eagle award was received and the name of the council in which the award was earned.

Planning director meets with court

BENTON — Ron Yersak, planning director of the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission in Malden, appeared at Thursday's meeting of the Scott County Court to discuss the Community Development Act signed into law Aug. 22 by President Gerald Ford.

Yersak explained to the court that the law abolished several federal programs that had been administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, such as the urban renewal and model cities programs, and the money formerly used to finance those programs had been put into a block grant program similar to revenue sharing.

Missouri's share is presently $6 million, which will be distributed throughout the state, but the amount can be changed by Congress, Yersak said.

Any unit of local government is eligible for a share of the funds, as long as it meets certrain requirements, he added.

Yersak said there are four general requirements that altogether boil down to the need for a comprehensive plan to be submitted with the application for funds.

Yersak discussed the possibility of such a plan being drawn up for Scott County at an estimated cost of $10,000 to 13,000, which the county might be able to get back under the new funding program.

He said grants received through the new program may be used for anything state law allows, including matching federal funds with other federal funds. He said that much community development work may be financed with the funds, the only exceptions being new housing, hospitals, airports, libraries or nursing homes.

Oran Mayor Kenneth Ransdell came before the court and nominated Clinton Hodges to succeed the late Allen Wagoner as a member of the Oran Special Road District board of directors for the remainder of a term that expires next June.

The court approved the nomination and made the appointment.

Mrs. Jerome Schlitt of Oran Route One appeared before the court to complain that two mufflers had been torn off her car due to the poor condition of the railroad crossing near her home.

The court informed her it was not the responsibiility of the Scott County Court but of Missouri Pacific Railroad.

The court did agree, however, to send a letter to the company asking a representative to meet with the court and Mrs. Schlitt.

Rezoning suggestion approved

EAST PRAIRIE — A recommendation by the Planning and Zoning Commission for the rezoning of lot one, block one of the Chapman Addition from residential to commercial was approved Thursday night by the City Council.

The rezoning was necessary before a trailer park permit could be issued to Tom Ferrell of East Prairie, who is in the process of establishing a trailer park on north Kirkendall Street.

City Manager Frank Carter said Ferrell has met all ordinance requirements andrecommended that the permit be issued. A rezoning ordinance will be drawn up by City Attorney Fielding Potashnick to be presented to the council for its approval.

The council approved payment of $466.01, the city's pro-rated share of the fee for an attorney representing the Municipal Pooling Services, a commission of 20 Bootheel cities bidding to purchase Associated Natural Gas Co. facilities.

Also approved was payment of $196.50, the city's annual dues for Missouri Municipal League membership.

Upon request of an attorney representing Jim Owens, the council entered into the minutes of the meeting its approval of City ManagerCarter's rejection of a package liquor license for Owens Service Station on Washington Drive. A request that the reason for the rejection be entered in the minutes was denied.

Parking meters will be covered from Dec. 16 through Christmas Day for shopping convenience, and turkeys will be presented to city employes instead of cash bonus of $10 for Christmas.

In routine action, the council approved the collector's report of $44,146.99 for November, payments of $8,780.56 in expenditures for the month and the police judge's report which showed a total of $739 assessed in fines for the month.

Bulldogs bite Mules, 93-72

A balanced offense and another good defensive effort led the Sikeston Bulldogs to their second win in a row by a surprisingly easy 93-72 score, upsetting third seeded Poplar Bluff.

On the Poplar Bluff side of the ledger, 6-foot-3 Scott Harrell proved that the gridiron was not his only sporting home, canning 23 points and leading the game's rebounders with his total of eleven. He got offensive help from guard James Dement who pumped in 21 for the only other Mule in double figures.

Defense was again the name of the game, despite the final score. Unlike the Charleston encounter, where the Coach Buddy Spears gang used a tight defense to knock off the second seeded unit, Thursday's game was wide-open with a lot of Sikeston steals and 26 total turnovers for the Mules, who obviously were suffering from first-game jitters. The Bulldogs, unperturbed by a physical Poplar Bluff defense, hit nearly 62 percent from the floor, and gained their large margin of victory by canning 25 of 35 free throws.

Poplar Bluff beat themselves by missing 16 of their 28 charity tosses. Rebounds were mostly even, Sikeston holding a slight 40-37 edge.

Cool shooting by the Mules also contributed to the SHS victory. Jim King's troops hit just 37 percent from the floor, which compounded with the free throws, hampered the mistake-prone Mules.

By virtue of the easy victory Sikeston earns the right to oppose Lilbourn Saturday night at 9 p.m. in the championship game. In the three year history ofthe tournament, this is the first time Sikeston has played for first place.

Lilborun, Hayti claim wins

Top rated Lilbourn maintained its seat in the Sikeston Invitational Tournament Thursday night when they defeated New Madrid 77-59. Hayti moved into the consolation finals with a 55-54 win over the Dexter Bearcats.

Dexter opened the game by gaining the edge over the fourth seeded Hayti Indians. By steady playing, they ran ahead to hold a 32-29 halftime lead.

While the Indians were down, they were not yet ready to give up. Dexter found it tough going during the third period and saw the tables turned as they fell behind. Hayti kept the pace going and Dexter was forced to play catch-up ball but fell short of the mark to step out of the tourney.

Sylvester James and Wayne Robinson teamed for over half of the Indians total points with 19 and 14 respectively. Don Reynolds hit for 17 points to lead Dexter's scoring with Tim Holden pumping in 16.

Lilbourn had little difficulty with the New Madrid Indians during the second game. The Panthers had three players in double figures who helped carry them to the win – Ernest McFerren and Det Treadwell scored 18 each and Frankie Robinson pitched in 15.

New Madrid fell behind the Panthers by seven in the opening quarter. They could not stay within close reach of the top ranked team and saw their hopes slowly dwindle away.

Harold Tucker and Steven Glenn hit for 15 points apiece with Craig Hunter dumping in 12. Ralph Tucker added 10.

Action will resume Saturday with Hayti facing the Charleston Blue Jays for fifth place. New Madrid will take on Poplar Bluff and Sikeston will go against Lilbourn.

Hawks rally

ORAN — The Kelly had to put together a fourth quarter rally Hawks had to put together a foureth quarter rally to overcome the Oran Eagles 83-78 offer Richland downed College High 52-46 in the losers bracket of the Oran invitational tournament Thursday night.

With Keith Campbell, Robert Taylor and Ronnie Hurst pumping in the points, Oran buzzed past the Kelly defense for 18 points in the first period while the Eagle defense was holding the Hawks to 13 and held the lead until late in the game.

Kelly's defense was unable to stop the scoring of this trio in the second period as well and Oran added another point to their lead and led 40-34 at the half.

The Eagles continued to put the pressure on the favored Hawks in the third period but began to run into foul trouble which eventually led to defeat. Oran built up a 12 point, 64-52, lead after the third period and seemed on their way to the first big upset of the tournament, but Kelly's press defense rose to the occasion and came roaring back to force the Eagles into enough turnovers to outscored the Eagles 31-14 in the last eight minutes of the game and come away the winner to advance into the finals Saturday night.

Oran outshot the Hawks from the field 39-35, but the free throws spelled the difference as Kelly put in 13 charity tosses to only six for the Eagles.

Campbell finished with 28 points, Hurst 20 and Taylor 22. Kelly featured a balanced scoring attack with Jamie Burger and Russ Mothershead hitting 18 apiece, Mike Brasher 17, Ron Schlosser 12 and Bob Felter 10.

College High surprised the Richland Rebels with their defense for the first two quarters but the Rebels came alive in the second half, particularly the fourth period and came away with the win.

The Preps, playing perhaps their best basketball in the past few years took a 14-10 first period lead and added four more to the margin in the second quarter to lead 26-18 at the half.

Richland began to control the game after the intermission and cut four points off the lead in the third quarter and took over the game in the final eight minutes.

Luke Cano scored 16 points to lead the Preps and Mim Clay dropped in 21 for the Rebels.

BERNIE----Steve Rushin paced Bloomfield to a 71-69 overtime victory over Clarkton in semifinal round action of the 15th annual Bernie invitational basketball tournament Thursday night. Risco defeated Parma 64-53 to set up tonight's championship bout.

Rushin scored 33 points, eight coming in the three minute overtime period after notching four points late in the game to keep the Wildcats on even terms with the Reindeer.

Bloomfield charged out to a 20-10 first quarter lead and seemed headed for an easy win, but Clarkton revered the table in the second quarter and out-pointed the Wildcats by the same score as both teams went into the halftime break tied at 30-all.

Coach Joe Nichols Wildcats out-muscled the Reindeer in the third quarter and grabbed a three point lead, 51-48, but failed to hold as Clarkton defensed its way into a 63-63 tie with a 15-12 fourth period advantage.

Risco took a 12-10 lead over their neighboring rivals, Parma Pirates, and stayed ahead the rest of the way behind the 24 point leadership of all-stater Andy Smesler, who is quickly recovering from an injured hand. Steve Gibson led the Pirates scoring with 18 points.

DHS upsets Notre Dame

LUTESVILLE---Advance continued to roar past their opponents in the Woodland Invitational Tournament Thursday night as they turned back the host team 81-47. Mitch Stroder and Nate Crowden teamed up to pull out the win for the Delta Bobcats in double overtime against Notre Dame, 68-67. In the consolation game, Zalma won it 69-64 over Oak Ridge.

Woodland found it hard to keep up with the fast paced Hornets. Steady playing by the entire Advance team put the finish on Woodland's hopes of taking their own tourney.

The Hornets jumped out to a 19-8 first quarter lead giving them the advantage which carried them to the win. Wile the Cardinals put forth a determined dffort, it was not enough. Advance took a 38-25 lead into the locker room at half.

The second half proved to be of little difference for the Woodland squad and Advance rolled in 28 markers during the final period to put the icing on the cake.

High point man for the Hornets was David Tropf with 15. Dan Long followed with 14 and Steve Cookson with 12. Royce Young and David Cummins both contributed 10. Woodland's Billy Long hit for 12 points and Carl Black 11 to round out double figure scoring.

In the second game, the number two and three ranked teams battled it out for a shot at Advance. Game play see-sawed but Notre Dame gained control first half half play holding a slim 20-19 halftime edge. During third quarter, the Delta Bobcats moved out in front but Notre Dame came back in the fourth to go ahead.

In the remaining seconds of the game Mitch Stroder hit for two free throws to bring the game to a 59-59 tie. In the first overtime, both teams hit for four points each with Stroder once again putting in the tying basket. The second overtime saw Delta pick up a single point on the Bulldogs to move into the championship berth.

Nate Crowden dumped in 35 points to earn high scoring honors for the Delta team. Mark Buessink dumped in 31 and Greg Buessink 10 for Notre Dame.

It was a tight game between the Zalma squad and Oak Ridge but the Bulldogs managed to hold off the Oak Ridge team to capture the win. At the end of the first quarter, Zalma held only a one point edge but widened the gap during second period play and at the half they held a 47-39 lead.

Oak Ridge added a little steam in the third quarter and moved ahead, but Zalma was up for the win and in the final period came back to take the consolation win.

Gene Lineberry scored 19 points for the winning squad. David Kirkpatrick hit for 17 markers and numberous rebounds to aid the Zalma Bulldogs. Stan West made 14 for the night. Mike Pfeiffer threw 24 through the hoop and Dale Ludwig 14 for Oak Ridge's efforts. Bruce Schoen added 10.

NEW ORLEANS — The Texas Rangers acquired veteran centerfielder Willie Davis from Montreal in a trade completed at baseball's winter meetings.

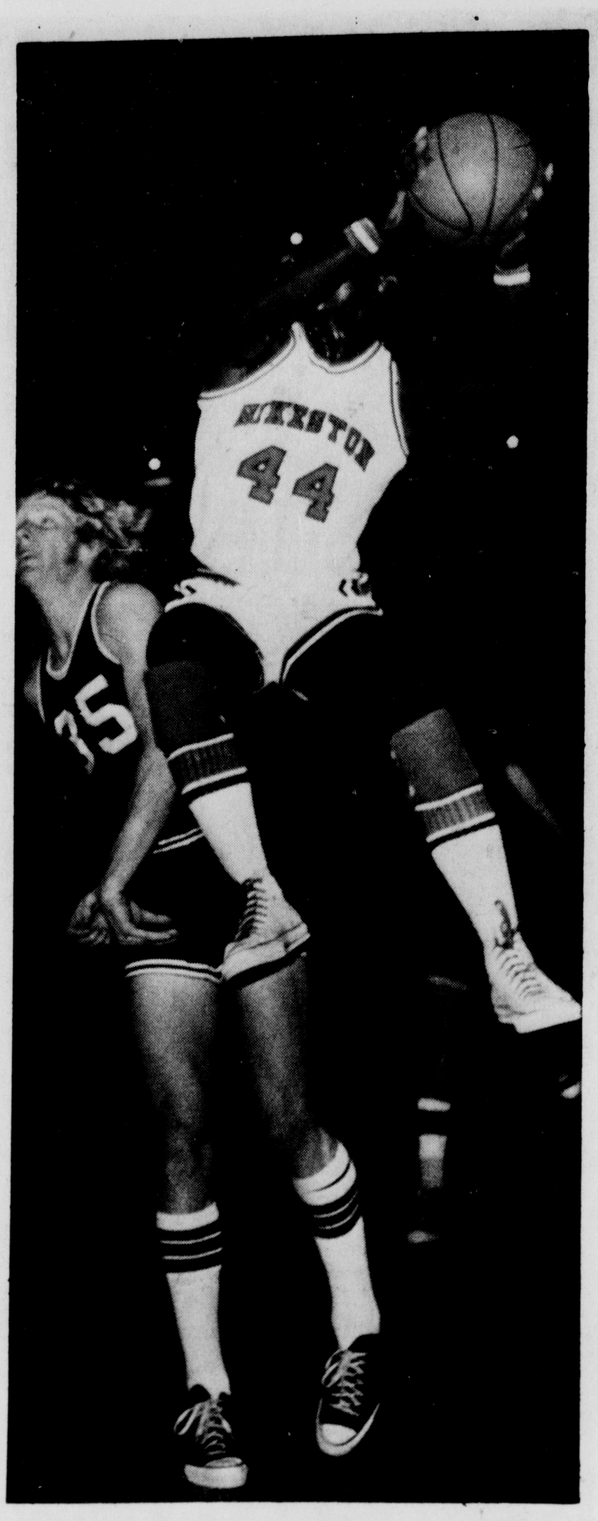
GOLF

MIYAZAKI, Japan — Gibby Gilbert of the United States and Tadashi Kitta of Japan shot four-under-oar 68s for the first-round lead in the $166,666 Phoenix Golf Tournament.

BOWLING

HONOLULU — Carmen Salvino, of Chicago, rolled a 2,357 total for a five-pin lead after the first day of the $35,000 Winston-Salem Hawaiian Invitational, the year's last major event in the professional bowling tour.



'Do the twist'

SPORTS

By The Associated Press

Matchmaker Sam Silverman signed Poirier Thursday to face Vinnie Curto of Boston and Miami after Licata withdrew because of a back ailment. However, the Massachusetts Boxing Commission will limit the bout to nine rounds, instead of 10, because of Poirier's age.

Poirier, a classy boxer, has won all 22 pro starts. Curto, only 18, has an 18-1 pro record, losing only to world middleweight champion Rodrigo Valdes on a 10-round decision.

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) — Karl Anderson of Greene, Maine, and Ron Biedermann of Stowe, Vt., failed to finish their first run and were eliminated Thursday in the giant slalom of the First Snow Ski Tournament, the opening race of the season for the World Cup.

FUKUOKA, Japan (AP) — Olympic marathon champion Frank Shorter of the United States is favored to win the ninth annual Fukuoka international marathon race Sunday for the fourth straight year against a field of 96 runners. The 27-year-old distance star is unbeaten in international races since he first won the Fukuoka event in 1971.

The 26-mile, 385-yard race is sanctioned by the Inernational Amateur Athletic Foundation and will be run through the streets of Fukuoka City, 900 miles south of Tokyo.

GENERAL

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, the grand old lady of tennis who won the first of 44 national championships in 1909, died at the age of 88.

Baseball expansion

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Willie Davis is going to the Texas Rangers while New Orleans and Seattle are headed for the big leagues.

Davis, a veteran outfielder dealt Thursday by the Montreal Expos to the Rangers, will get there first and it has nothing to do with his swiftness of foot.

The target date of 1976 seems likely for major league baseball franchises in this host city of the winter meetings and Seattle. That indication came from baseball officials Thursday after day-long sessions of the American and National League club owners, both in separate and joint meetings.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and a newly formed joint major league expansion committee met with New Orleans Superdome officials for 1½ hours Thursday. No other expansion hopefuls met with Kuhn and his committee Thursday and the Commissioner termed the session with New Orleans people significant.

This city's multimillion dollar Superdome is expected to be completed early next year, a factor in its favor.

"We received indications that New Orleans will have a major league baseball franchise by 1976," said Bill Connick, a Superdome commission official.

The green light for Seattle was indicated in American League President Lee MacPhail's remark that "we have assured Seattle that it will obtain a franchise in some fashion."

Both Kuhn and MacPhail were otherwise vague about expansion or the possible movement of such franchises as Baltimore, which is up for sale, and Oakland, which is suffering from poor attendance despite three straight world championships.

Kuhn shrugged off proposals by the National League's influential Walter O'Malley that a third league be formed to encompass new franchises and-or that major league baseball purchase the Baltimore and Oakland franchises.

Kuhn listed Seattle, New Orleans, Toronto and Washington as having the best chances for major league franchises in the future because they either had stadiums built or new ones under way. The fact that Seattle has pending litigation against the American League since its franchise was moved to Milwaukee after only one season, 1970, has enhanced its chances.

On the trade front, only two lesser deals were completed Thursday in addition to Davis moving to Texas for infielder Pete Mackinin and pitcher Don Stanhouse. The interlegaue trading deadline expires at midnight, CST, tonight.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I recently read in the San Antonio News an article that frightened me half to death. It was about screw worms in Texas. The article stated screw worms affected people as well as animals. It stated there were 8,900 cases treated in Texas last year and 75 per cent of these were in South Texas and the San Antonio area.

We plan to retire and make our home in San Antonio so you can understand why I might be somewhat concerned with this problem.

I am especially interested in knowing who and how screw worms attack. What is the incidence and what area seems to be most affected? How can they be recognized and controlled? How can we protect ourselves from contact with them? If they should attack a person what is the percentage of fatality?

We have two children and since our possible retirement sites are limitless, I wouldn't want to make any move that may endanger their lives in any way.

DEAR READER — Relax! That article was about the incidence in animals and people. I talked to the County Health Department in San Antonio, and they confirmed my impression that human infestation was quite rare, including in San Antonio. About three years ago there were 10 cases in humans. There was also one death near San Antonio. The rest of the problems were in animals, not humans.

Screw worms are the larvae from the screw worm fly. The fly lays its eggs in a cut or injured area. The eggs hatch and produce larvae. Being raised on the farm, I treated several cases in farm animals when I was a boy. If detected and treated early the animal doesn't have any problems. The cattle on a large ranch or animals not under close supervision are not so lucky.

Humans get screw worms the same way. Most of the 10 cases were in children with scalp problems from lack of hygiene. The scratched area provided a place for the fly to lay a few eggs. In better circumstances human infections do not occur.

I have seen only two cases and both were in Kansas, not Texas. In both instances the victims were inclined to drink excessively and would be lying outdoors in a stupor. While in this state the flies entered the nose and left their eggs.

So, unless you are going to be lying around somewhere unconscious for some reason, such as from too much alcohol, I think you need not fear any problems at all from screw worms.

The screw worm problem concerns farmers and ranchers, and there are national programs for fly control to protect livestock. That is why it is of public interest, not because it is a significant health problem for people.

San Antonio is a lovely town and entirely safe healthwise. If the screw worm problem is all that alarms you then you have nothing to worry about.

Terror mocks idea of Holy Land peace

Fragile barriers laboriously constructed to avert new and calamitous war in the Middle East are menaced today by the deadly cycle of terror and counterterror.

A specter out of the past, organized terror seems to mock the very idea of peace in the tortured Holy Land. Too, there are doleful paradoxes in a comparison of the terror behind today's Arab demand for a Palestinian state and the pre-1948 Zionist drive for a Jewish nation.

Is there a chance the terror will abate now, in view of the current stance of Yasir Arafat, the Palestine Liberation Organization chief? Evidently the wide recognition given his PLO by the United Nations lately has impelled its leader to seek a look of respectability and moderation; of relying less on terror and more on negotiation and political maneuvering.

But given even the best intentions, with the momentum they now have, today's terrorists would be difficult to rein. In any case, the Israelis don't believe Arafat and they say his military organization, Al Fatah, is responsible for the latest terror raid into Israel.

Because of a long and complex history of violence, it is just about impossible to make precise comparisons between Jewish methods of pre-1948 days and Arab terror techniques of today.

However, there are ironic similarities as well as apparent differences.

Before 1948 a variety of Jewish underground organizations in Palestine traversed the political spectrum. Today, the Arabs have a variety of such organizations of their own, across the spectrum.

Like the pre-1948 Jews, today's Arabs generally are united on goals but divided on methods. Before 1948, Haganah, as Zionism's paramilitary arm, tended to zero in on specific British political, administrative and military targets and professed to shun spectacular random terror such as that carried out by two smaller groups, Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Gang.

Today's PLO under Arafat, like Haganah, presents itself as the centrally organized and disciplined military arm of a political movement. It has run into expressed disagreement from smaller, extreme Arab guerrilla outfits who suggest that Arafat looks too non-violent and too potentially moderate.

There are differences between pre-1948 and now. One is that today innocent bystanders seem to be in much more peril. Random acts of terror include such Arab extremist acts as bombing and shooting up crowded airports, blasting buildings in European capitals, holding hostages and skyjacking passenger aircraft, the latter a relatively new phenomenon of the era of mass jet travel.

Frankly speaking

Lincoln's dream is goal of Congress

By THOMAS F. EAGLETON
U. S. Senator—Missouri

A government which is truly of, by and for the people was Lincoln's dream, and it is still the goal of the current Congress.

Another step toward that goal was made recently when Congress overrode the President's veto of amendments to strengthen the Freedom of Information Act of 1966.

The original act was supposed to open for inspection -- by any person -- government agency rules, opinions, orders, records, and proceedings. The only major exceptions to this were matters involving national defense or foreign policy, trade secrets, inter-agency memos, personnel files of which disclosure would constitute invasion of persnal privacy, and criminal investigatory files.

Bureaucrats Against It

Yet the bureaucratic departments have long fought this Act and have undermined it through ingenius methods -- high fees for finding the documents, long delays, and a knack for losing things in the shuffle.

Some agencies have even failed to provide index files and master listings of their documents -- and then accused inquirers of fishing for information. Others have put non-classified material in with classified material and then claimed it couldn't be separated.

Regardless of the method, the motive was the same -- to keep away from the public information which might be embarassing to the agency or to the Administration.

Public Deserves To Know

But this attitude is no longer being accepted by the American people. The people have the right to know what their government is doing and how it is operating. It is only with this knowledge that agencies can effectively be held accountable for any mismanagement or incompetence.

The new amendments speed up the process of providing information by requiring the agency to either answer inquiries within 10 days or to appeal the request within 20 days. They also allow the courts to decide whether a document which is classified "secret" is properly classified, or whether there is a reasonable basis to reverse the classification.

Secrecy in government is nothing new. There has always been the tendency of the bureaucrat to cover up his mistakes and there has always been a need to keep some few things truly secret for the sake of national security.

In the past, the public tended not to care about the little bureaucratic mistakes as long as things worked right most of the time. The government, after all, was hired to take care of public affairs while the public goes about its private business, and the public didn't want to be bothered with the details.

But the astonishing secrecy with which the Nixon Administration carried out its business did bother the public. The past election was evidence of this.

I called for a strengthening of the Freedom of Information Act nearly three years ago. Although it took a governmental credibility crisis to bring it about, it is my hope that these amendments will close the lopholes which allowed bureaucrats to circumvent the spirit of the law. It is my hope that the people's records and documents will really be made available to the people.

ROBERT FULLER
Dr. Kelly Brackett in
'Emergency' Saturdays, NBC
NBC Television Network
(In Color, 7-8 p.m., CST0

According to legend, most cowboys ride off into the sunset to live happily ever after but Robert Fuller, of NBC-TV's "Emergency!", rode off into the Emergency Room of "Rampart General Hospital" where he plays a highly professional physician.

In September, 1974, "Dr. Kelly Brackett" will be back with his stethoscope, and former cowboy actor Robert Fuller couldn't be happier. After years of "Laramie," "Wagon Train," and assorted cowboy roles, Fuller was delighted to get away from the dust, the dirt and the saloon fights which studded his TV appearances. Happily, his fans respond even more enthusiastically to him in the live-action film series than they did in his earlier shows.

Born in Troy, N.Y., the son of a naval officer and a choreographer, Fuller's childhood was spent in Florida and Illinois before the family moved to California. He served in the Army in Korea as a sergeant and returned to the U.S. in 1955. His first major acting job was as a member of Richard Boone's repertory company. Later, he traveled to New York to join Sanford Meisner's acting school.

Upon his return to California, he took a job as an extra in the film "Friendly Persuasion," starring Gary Cooper. In 1959 he won the starring role in NBC-TV's "Laramie."

His next series was NBC-TV's "Wagon Train," and later he was a guest star in various network shows and had starring roles in motion pictures and theatre productions.

He and his wife Patty (whom he married in December, 1962) and their children, Robert Jr. (10) and Christine (9), live in the Toluca Lake section of North Hollywood, Calif.

WORLD OF DISNEY
Sundays on the NBC Television Network (In Color, 6:30-7:30 pm, CST)

"The Wonderful World of Disney" series of nature stories, adventure tales, cartoons, dramas and comedies, begins its 14th season this fall on the NBC Television Network in a new time period, 7-8 p.m. NYT.

This is network television's longest-running prime-time program. It premiered in 1954, when the late Walt Disney first started to provide weekly family entertainment on television with his Davy Crockett stories, which became world famous.

Features to be shown on television for the first time will include dramas and comedies starring and featuring prominent names in the entertainment field.

Early last year, NBC Television and Walt Disney Productions announced firm production plans that assure the Emmy and Peabody Awards-winning series a place on the NBC-TV schedule at least through the 1975-76 season.

DEMOND WILSON
Lamont Sanford in 'Sanford and Son'
Fridays, NBC Television Network In Color, 7-7:30 pm CST)

Demond Wilson's mother admired Bill Robinson and wanted her son to grow up to be like the famous dancer. But the family lived in a Harlem flat where the floors were covered with linoleum--and tap dancing destroyed the linoleum. So little Demond was put in the bathroom, where the floor was covered with a harder, mosaic type tile, and told to dance.

"I didn't mind. I thought I was rather lucky. At the age of 4, my mother took me to try out for a part in the Broadway play 'Green Pastures' starring William Marshall. I got the part--playing a cherub in heaven. And I really believed Marshall was God. How many kids get to be in a play with God?:

After Wilson outgrew his mother's prodding he enrolled in Hunter College in New York where he studied drama and the arts. Two years later he dropped out to make some money, then he was drafted and sent to Vietnam.

After being discharged, Wilson tried show business again and went on tour with "Boys in the Band," a play with a homosexual theme. "That was the one thing my folks weren't too happy about," said Wilson, "They were relieved when I got in my old car and drove to Hollywood."

Then things happened fast. He won a part in "The Organization" starring Sidney Poitier, and then a role in a segment of "All in the Family" as a burglar. It was that role which led to his audition for the part of Lamont Sanford.

Baseball Detour;Country Stardom

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Charley Pride has made 22 record albums and 12 of them are gold. He's one of the top country artists in the United States today and the first black performer to make it as a top country artist. His "Mississippi Cotton Picking Delta Town" is No. 2 on the best-selling country chart of Nov. 2.

But, interesting as it is to hear him talk about today, it's even more interesting to hear him talk about the twists in the path to stardom. Maybe that's because he started out to become a Jackie Robinson and wound up instead an Ernest Tubb.

Pride was born in Sledge, Miss., and picked cotton with his parents, seven brothers and three sisters. "My Dad is retired now; he doesn't ever have to work any more. I got him taken care of, in Lambert, Miss., 16 miles from where I was born."

Pride's mother named him Charl Frank Pride and the year she died, 1956, she got copies of the birth certificates for all her children and found the midwife had written Charley instead of Charl. "I was in the Army so I had my name changed. When I was ready to be discharged, they had some embezzlement at the camp and they saw in the files I had two names. It took me two or three days to get it all straightened out."

Pride played baseball in the now-defunct Negro American League. "I pitched and played outfield.

"Two players in that league who went on to prominence were Hank Aaron and Ernie Banks. Ernie went straight from the Kansas City Monarchs to the Chicago Cubs. I remember he hit one off me, a home run, in Salina, Kan., that's still going. And I remember striking him out in Pine Bluff, Ark., three years later. I'm not a boastful person, but it's a fact I hit over 300 everywhere I played.

"Jackie Robinson, and later Willie Mays, used to play their all-stars against the Negro American League all-stars. I've got a clipping, I was the winning pitcher 4-3 in relief, in that game in 1956, just before I went in the Army. It's the first time the Negro League all-stars ever won."

One team which cut Pride from its roster told him to go to East Helena, Mont., because Anaconda Mining's zinc smelter kept 18 jobs open for ball players, regulating their days off so they could have a team. "I called my wife and told her I'd be making 20 bucks a day; I'd never made that much in my life.

"One day a guy that ran a club that had music on Thursdays when they had stock car racing called my foreman to see if he'd let me off two hours early to sing there. He'd heard me singing at ballgames over the PA system, when I'd be having a good night at the plate. I'd like to say I sang the National Anthem but I really did 'A Hole in the Bottom of the Sea.' My foreman said okay — I worked 3 to 11 p.m. — and I rented me a guitar and amplifier and sang country.

"In 1961 I went to spring training with the Angels in Southern California. I tried to look good too quick and I looked worse and worse. The pitching coach told me I didn't have a major league arm. I went to Gene Autry and told him I knew somebody had to help him once, so please don't send me home. He said he didn't run the team. They sent me home with a tuna fish sandwich and an orange.

CHARLEY PRIDE

"In 1972 I went to the first day of spring training at the same park with the Brewers and I remembered 1961 and how desperate I was.

MARTIN MILNER
Officer Pete Malloy
in 'Adam-12' Tuesdays,
NBC Television Network
(In Color, 7-7:30 p.m. CST)

Martin Milner's television success keeps him in the driver's seat. In high gear, Milner begins the seventh year of "Adam-12" behind the wheel of a patrol car as Officer Pete Malloy.

Adding to the four years of driving in TV series "Route 66," that's a lot of happy mileage for television viewers and Milner.

A native of Detroit, he moved to Seattle where he attended grade school. While a teen-ager, he moved to North Hollywood, Calif. In high school he prepared for his acting career by hiring an acting coach, which led to his acquiring an agent. He later studied theatre arts at the niversity of Southern California.

Milner's first major motion picture role came in 1947 when he played John Day, the second oldest son in "Life With Father."

Shortly after finishing the film, he was stricken with polio. There were periods of despair but he recovered completely after being bedridden for a year.

In 1952 his career again was interrupted, this time by induction into the Army for a two-year hitch. He was assigned to direct 20 training films. In addition, Milner served as master of ceremonies for a touring show unit based at Fort Ord, Calif.

While still in the Army he was cast in "The Long Gray Line," the 1955 film starring Tyrone Power and Maureen O'Hara.

But 1957 was probably the momentous year of his life. Milner married actress-singer Judy Jones; he won an important role in the Hecht-Hill-Lancaster production, "Sweet Smell of Success," and he played a major part in the Warner Bros. picture "Marjorie Morningstar."

As Tod Stiles in "Route 66" three years later, Milner traveled all over the country while doing the show.

When "Route 66" ended he returned to motion pictures and gueststar roles on TV until his starring role in "Adam-12."

Four years ago Milner decided that ranch life, away from the bustling city, would be ideal. He purchased a 24-acre plot with 2,500 avocado trees near Fallbrook, Calif., about 90 miles from Hollywood, and built a house which he designed.

DAVID HARTMAN
Star of 'Lucas Tanner'
Wednesdays, NBC Television Network (In Color, 8-9 p.m.,CST)

David Hartman figures you ought to like what you do for a living so he zeroed in on three of his favorite pursuits--communication, music and athletics--and wove a multi-faceted, enjoyable way of life for himself.

Born on May 19 in Pawtucket, R.I., Hartman attended Mt. Hermon Preparatory School and by graduation time had earned seven letters in sports. He was offered baseball contracts by the then-Boston Braves and the Philadelphia Phillies.

However, David chose to continue his schooling. "I entered Duke University for a number of reasons. Partially because of the fine music and liberal arts program, partially because of baseball and, finally, because I wanted a change of scenery from New England."

Immediately upon his discharge from the Air Force (as a 2nd Lieutenant(, Hartman enrolled in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. He appeared in a number of off-Broadway musicals and in summer stock prior to signing for the role of Rudolph, the singing waiter, in the original Broadway cast of "Hello, Dolly!"

Some 800 performances later, Hartman joined the original cast of "The Yearling." He also toured with the Harry Belafonte Singers and followed with a year in the national company of "My Fair Lady." Hartman also was in the off-Broadway revival of "Best Foot Forward."

of Robin Graham in "The Dove." The part of his lover and future wife, Patti Ratteree, is played by Deborah Raffin. And in the case of the film's two young stars there was no mystery. For Bottoms and Raffin it was the chance of a lifetime.

It is the first film for Joseph Bottoms, who is a native of Santa Barbara, Calif. He has done community theater in his home town and is the younger brother of Timothy Bottoms, star of "The Last Picture Show" and recently "The White Dawn."

Deborah Raffin, 20, also a native of southern California, was a successful fashion model for several years before her first film appearance in "40 Carats." "The Dove" is her second film.

But eventually you have to come back to Robin Graham, who started it all. You have to wonder. Getting out of bed, cleaning his room, mowing the lawn: those are the usual chores a middle-class teenager undertakes. But sailing around the world....

Perhaps the simplest answer is the best. He had a mountain to climb and he climbed it. It only looks crazy to people on the ground.

By ROBERT KLINGE

When Robin Lee Graham was 16 years old, he got in his boat and went sailing. Five years and 30,000 miles later he came home, the youngest person in history to sail around the world alone. By the time Graham was 21 he had spent nearly a quarter of his life alone on his 23-foot sloop called "Dove" Why did he do it?

"When I asked him, he didn't have the answer. All he said was 'I thought it would be fun,' " says Gregory Peck, the producer of the true-life film "The Dove."

When Gregory Peck was 55 years old, he got on a plane and flew to Fiji to begin scouting locations for "The Dove." Two years and 60,000 miles later, he came home. His first film as a producer was finished. By the time Peck was 57 he had spent nearly a third of his life as one of the biggest stars in Hollywood. Why did he make "The Dove"?

"My first reaction was that here was a story that entertained and moved me," he said. "I found I could identify with both the boy and his father, who encouraged him to make the trip. There was a love story in it as well. I recognized it as touching and funny and human. It struck me that here was the kind of thing that everybody wants to see. I simply wanted a contemporary film for all ages and they're hard to come by these days."

It was a natural for Peck. As producer he assumed the role of commander of an international crew of 40 professionals. Nine identical sloops had to be built and stationed at various points around the world. Five identical cats needed to be trained. Then there was the logistical problem of transporting 11,400 pounds of highly sensitive equipment. It all sounds vaguely reminiscent, like something out of one of Peck's other roles in "The Guns of Navarone" or "Twelve O'Clock High." Only this time the challenges were real.

Then there's Charles Jarrott, the director of "The Dove." Why did he do it?

"The Dove' makes a positive statement about a boy who set out to do something and succeeded. It's not a Disney story; there is some abrasion to it," he said.

Besides, Jarrott is at home with the filming of epic adventures. Before "The Dove," Jarrott had directed "Anne of the Thousand Days," "Mary ,Queen of Scots" and "Lost Horizon."

The cameraman's motives may be a little easier to understand. He is Sven Nykvist, the award-winning Swedish cinematographer.

Nykvist has a cozy relationship with peculiar notions. He became internationally famous as Ingmar Bergman's cameraman. He has been responsible for the photography in nearly all of Bergman's films. Nykvist won an Academy Award as Best Cinematographer for Bergman's classic, "Cries and Whispers." His camera work on "The Dove" represents one of the few times Nykvist has worked for any director other than Bergman.

Still, you have to wonder what kind of thing would lure anybody to brave the sort of 40-foot waves and gale force winds that the cast and crew encountered during the filming of "The Dove."
